JUSTICE OF PEACE, WITNESS AGAINST SHERIFF, ADMITS DRINKING EVIDENCE

MANY AT COURTHOUSE GOT SOME HE ADDS

Attorney for Willmann Declares That He Will Prove Werremeyer Is One of "Biggest Moonshiners in County."

A. H. Werremeyer, Justice of the Peace of Centre Township, in St. Louis County, star witness for the State in the proceedings to remove Sheriff John F. Willmann of St. Louis County from office, testified today, in the jury trial of the case before Judge McElhinney at Clayton, to the circumstances under which a still was run last July on Louis Wolfsberger's farm on Olive street road. The charge against Willmann is neglect of duty, in failing to raid the still before July 17, though he learned of its existence July 9.

Former State Senator A. E. L. Gardner, attorney for Sheriff Willmann, said in his outline of the defense that he intended to show that Justice Werremeyer was "the biggest moonshiner in St. Louis County." In the cross-examination he questioned the Sheriff as to the use which he had made of moonshine whisky stored in his official quarters in the courthouse basement, as evidence in cases.

Denies Selling Liquor.

Gardner obtained admissions from Werremeyer that he had been accustomed to drink this "evidence," whenever he desired a drink, that he gave a drink to a friend in the courtroom, and that the whisky was brought to him in quantities much larger than the requirements of evidence warranted. He denied having sold any of the liquor, though Gardner asked this question in relation to two men, whose names are on the list of witnesses.

Laughter was caused in the courtroom by a number of Gardner's questions and Werremeyer's answers, and the jury at times joined in the merriment. Werremeyer at no time appeared to see anything to laugh about, and all his replies were made in the gravest manner.

"I was one of the fortunate ones," Werremeyer related, in telling of his opportunities for drinking the moonshine product, taken in raids as evidence. "Nearly all the officials in the building (the courthouse) got it. The attorneys got it, too. You got a bottle," he said to Gardner, who demanded particulars, whereupon Werremeyer said, turning to the jury, that he did not see Gardner get the liquor personally. "It was probably delivered to him," he added. "Everybody around here got it."

"And you were the main distributor?" Gardner demanded. Werremeyer said he was not, and Gardner asked which of the courthouse officials had obtained the liquor. Prosecuting Attorney Mueller objected to this as immaterial, but Gardner edged in the question whether Mueller had received any. And Werremeyer replied that he did not remember.

In his direct testimony, Werremeyer told of summoning Sheriff Willmann to the Wolfsberger farm July 9, after he had found the still there. He said Willmann demanded, "What the hell have you got here?" and that he replied to Willmann, "The biggest still I ever saw," and Wolfsberger says you are protecting him."

Tells of Sheriff's Reply.

"I'll knock anyone's block off that says that," he said Willmann replied. "I'm sick and tired of this. I have been getting the name and not the game."

Werremeyer told of his conversation with Deputy Sheriff Goericke, saying that Goericke found fault with him for having made a fool of Goericke, by summoning the Sheriff to the place, and Werremeyer said he replied to the deputy, "Bob, I'm as innocent as that hay frame," pointing to a piece of farm equipment.

It was after dark, Werremeyer

MRS. JAMES J. HILL DIES AFTER A LONG ILLNESS

Widow of Railroad Magnate Leaves Six Daughters and Three Sons —To Be Buried on Estate.

By the Associated Press.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Nov. 22.—Mrs. James J. Hill, widow of the president of the Great Northern Railway, died at her home here this morning following a long illness.

She was 75 years old and had been in failing health since the death of her husband in May, 1916. She will be buried beside her husband on the Hill estate's North Oaks farm, near here.

Born in New York City in 1846, Mrs. Hill came to St. Paul in 1854, and after completing her education in a convent at Milwaukee, was married to Hill here in 1867. Until her husband's death she drove daily with him to his office here.

Mrs. Hill is survived by six daughters and three sons. They are Mrs. Samuel Hill of Washington, D. C., and Seattle; Mrs. Anson McCook Beard, Mrs. Michael Gavin and Mrs. George T. Slade of New York City; Mrs. E. C. Lindley and Mrs. Boeckmann of St. Paul, James A. Hill of New York and Walter J. Hill and Louis W. Hill of St. Paul.

GRAHAM'S WIDOW CANNOT SHARE IN $500,000 TRUST

Three Children Will Get Estate Which Was Placed in Irrevocable Trusteeship Before His Last Marriage.

HOLDINGS MOSTLY STOCK IN PAPER FIRM

Attempt, Made in 1917 to Break Trusteeship on Ground He Had Not Understood Terms, Failed.

The $500,000 estate of Henry B. Graham, who was shot and killed yesterday by a negro chauffeur in his home in Hampton Park, St. Louis County, will go entirely to Graham's three children, with no share for his fourth wife, Mrs. Georgina Shore Graham.

Former United States Senator X. P. Wilfley, attorney for the trustees who have held Graham's property since May, 1916, said to a Post-Dispatch reporter today that Mrs. Graham would have no tenable claim to any part of the estate, since it was held not by Graham, but by the trustees, from a time antedating her marriage to him. The trust arrangement provided that, after Graham's death, the income should be divided among the children, each child receiving one-third of the principal on reaching the age of 25.

The elder of the two daughters is Mrs. Dorothy Fields, 21 years old, of Coronado, Cal. The younger daughter, Marjorie Graham, 19, is a student in Vassar College, and the son, Henry, 10, is the youngest of the children.

The only inheritance which it seems possible for the widow to receive is any money which Graham may have saved in the last two years from his income, which in that time, since the paying off of his debts, has been $25,000 to $35,000 a year. Whether Graham put aside any substantial part of this income, or whether he used it to obtain life insurance in his wife's favor, Wilfley was not informed.

Created Irrevocable Trust.

Graham, in May, 1916, voluntarily created an irrevocable trust, under which he conveyed all his assets, including the residence in Hampton Park, to John E. Bishop and the American Trust Co. as trustee. By the terms of the trust, Graham was to get $500 a month income from his estate, until his debts, amounting to about $250,000, had been paid. After the paying of the debts, he was to get the entire income.

The greater part of the estate was stock of the Graham Paper Co., and income from this stock rose. In the war period, to such an extent that the trustees were able, within a little more than three years, to discharge Graham's debts. The income from this stock is now back to normalcy.

Graham created the trusteeship about the time he divorced his third wife, formerly Miss Alice Bowerman of Springfield, Ill., in 1916. He was married in July of that year to Georgina Shore, after her sister, Mrs. Vera Elizabeth Snowden, had obtained a divorce with the expectation of becoming the fourth Mrs. Graham.

Tried to Break Trusteeship.

In 1917, apparently with a view to his wife's interest, Graham sued to have the trusteeship set aside, and a new and more limited trusteeship established. Because of the irrevocable character of the trusteeship, the only ground on which he could make such a plea was that of incapacity, and he represented that, at the time the trusteeship was established, he was incapable of understanding its terms. This incapacity, he said, was the result of excessive drinking.

In support of the claim of his incapacity, Graham testified that he took 100 drinks a day and that his liquor bills were $450 a month. It was his custom, at the time the trusteeship was created, he said, to take 10 or 15 drinks before breakfast and then eat no breakfast. Through the day he took a drink after each cigarette and he smoked a great many cigarettes.

The suit was decided adversely to Graham on the ground that his drinking did not impair his mental capacity sufficiently to invalidate his legal acts. An appeal was taken to the Supreme Court, but Graham failed to break the trusteeship.

VIRGINIA RAPPE'S MANAGER CALLED IN ARBUCKLE TRIAL

Al Semnacher Relates Conversation With Comedian That Followed Death of the Film Actress.

HOTEL CHAMBERMAID ALSO A WITNESS

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 22.—In the trial of Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle, motion picture comedian, here today on a manslaughter charge in connection with the death of Virginia Rappe, film actress, the State sprung a surprise by calling Al Semnacher to the stand. Semnacher was Miss Rappe's so-called "manager," and it was with him that she came to San Francisco. His testimony at the preliminary trial was given with a show of great reluctance.

Semnacher related a conversation with Arbuckle the day following the party, in which he declared the film star told of having placed a piece of ice on the suffering girl's body.

The witness said he had told two different stories as to whether Arbuckle said "in or on the body," and refused to commit himself as to which was correct, saying he might be mistaken as to the exact words.

The State then sprung a new surprise by requesting that the bladder of the dead girl be examined by experts to determine whether any disease existed.

The State placed Josephine Keza, a chambermaid at the St. Francis, on the stand, and she testified that between 2 and 2:30 p. m. on the afternoon of Sept. 5 she heard the voice of a woman scream in 1219: "Oh, my God! No! No!" and a man's voice answered: "Shut up!"

The witness, in a grilling cross-examination, held to her story.

Chambermaid Tells Story.

When Miss Kezia, charmermaid at the St. Francis, took the stand there was a cupping of ears to hear the details of the party through the "keyhole."

Following a rigid cross-examination, at the request of the defense her complete statement as made to the District Attorney was read into the records. It contained a wealth of detail. She said she believed Arbuckle tried to kiss or did kiss Virginia Rappe on her arrival.

A detail of the party brought out in the Kezia woman's statement was the chasing of a dark-haired woman clad only in negligee through the hotel hall by a male member of the party. She could not describe how the man was dressed, but said she saw his bare legs. Likewise the limbs of the young woman were exposed to the air.

Alice Blake Again on Stand.

Alice Blake, one of the guests at the Arbuckle "party" in the St. Francis Hotel, where Virginia Rappe is alleged to have received the injuries that resulted in her death, was again on the stand today. She is considered a star witness for the State.

A statement she made shortly after the death of Virginia Rappe to Detective Griffin Kennedy was produced by Captain of Detectives Matheweson and was read into the record by the defense for the purpose, Counsel McNab announced, of "refreshing the memory of the witness."

The statement proved little different from her story on the stand late yesterday. The State endeavored to introduce all statements made by the witness but the defense successfully objected.

Miss Blake wore the same blue street dress today in which she was attired on the occasion of her first appearance, but the gray-hued slippers and stockings were replaced by black satin slippers and black silk hosiery.

She wore a Nile-green turban and a veil today.

For the first time since the trial opened, Minta Durfee Arbuckle, wife of the famous film star, was not in the courtroom when the proceedings opened. A big crowd was again on hand, but police kept them well in hand. Admission was by card only.

Joseph Rideaux of Los Angeles was called. He testified to Miss Rappe having taken physical exercises under his direction for overweight. Rideaux said he had tested

CLASH IN SENATE WHEN TAX BILL IS TAKEN UP

REMARKS EXPURGED LATER FROM RECORD

Reductions in Tax Bill in Rewritten Measure, Approved by House, Estimated by Officials.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Disorder marked the beginning today of Senate consideration of the conference report on the tax bill, the climax being reached in the unusual procedure of expunging senatorial remarks from the record.

The words stricken out were contained in a verbal clash between Senators Penrose, Republican, Pennsylvania, and Heflin, Democrat, Alabama, in which Penrose referred to the "black darkness of the State" represented by Mr. Heflin and the Alabama Senator referred to Penrose's State as "manipulated by predatory interests."

The clash was precitpated directly by conversations among Senators which Heflin claimed disturbed him in a speech on the Ford-Newberry senatorial contest.

He asked for order.

Senator Penrose, who earlier in the session had declined to permit Heflin to have the floor to continue his speech from yesterday, interjected that he was "not surprised that Senators did not care to listen to the speech."

The presiding officer called for order.

"And I am not surprised," Heflin resumed, at the remark of the Senator from Pennsylvania. He is known as the big boss of the State of Pennsylvania and no Senator can come here from that State unless O K'd by him."

Again there was a demand that business proceed in order.

Penrose then said he had no desire to interrupt Heflin, "knowing the black darkness he represented in his State."

More Senate Rules Broken.

More Senate rules thereupon were broken. Senator Cummins, presiding, ordered Heflin to stop, but Heflin shouted that no state in the Union "was so manipulated by predatory interests as Pennsylvania."

When order was restored Senator Lenroot, Republican, Wisconsin, made the motion to expunge the remarks. Senator Poindexter, Republican, Washington, argued it was useless to expunge the remarks since everyone in the Senate knew they had been said and that they would be printed in the newspapers.

The motion, however, was adopted by a viva voce vote, and with the smoke clearing, Senator Harrison, Democrat, of Mississippi, took the next step to restore peace by asking the Senate to adopt a resolution permitting Heflin to continue his speech "in order."

The tax bill was brought in then, without difficulty, but Heflin was first up after that action and renewed his attack on Senator Newberry, Republican, of Michigan, whose seat is contested by Henry Ford, Democrat.

Democrats Block Move.

An effort to put through in short order, the conference report on the tax bill was then blocked temporarily by Democrats. At the conclusion of a long address by Senator Heflin on the Ford-Newberry contest, Senator Jones, Republican, Washington, who was presiding, said: "The question is on agreeing to the conference report. Those in favor will say 'Aye.'" The handful of Senators on the Republican side said "Aye."

"I suggest the absence of a quorum," said Senator Hitchcock. When a quorum had been obtained Senator King, Democrat, Utah, opened the debate on the bill.

Here are the reductions in the nation's tax bill for the next calendar year as estimated by the experts on the basis of the rewritten tax revision bill.

Reductions by Items.

Individual income: Account of increased exemptions because of dependdtns, $30,000,000; heads of families, $40,000,000; decreased surtaxes, $60,000,000; capital gains, $20,000,000. DIPLOMATIC IMMUNITY OF BEVERAGE SUPPLY MAKES BRIAND'S DINNERS POPULAR

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.

By the Associated Press.

DIPLOMATIC dinners and luncheons incident to the armament conference have set up a new standard of etiquette for Americans. This was phrased today by one American official as follows:

"When I go to a friend's home and wine is served at dinner I drink very sparingly, because I know his supply is very limited, but when Premier Briand of the French delegation tenders us refreshments of the same kind, I go as far as I like in honor of diplomatic immunity."

KING GEORGE'S ONLY DAUGHTER TO WED VISCOUNT

Betrothal of Princess Mary to Viscount Lascelles, Former Army Oficer, Is Announced.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—The betrothal of Princess Mary, only daughter of King George and Queen Mary, to Viscount Lascelles, was announced this evening.

Viscount (Henry George Charles) Lascelles, who is 39 years old, and son of the fifth Earl of Harewood, is a veteran of the world war, having served as a Second Lieutenant of the Grenadier Guards from 1914 to 1917. He served as honorary attache in Rome from 1905 until 1907 and as aide de camp to the Governor-General of Canada from 1907 to 1911. He was wounded in the late war three times and won the distinguished service order and bar and the French Croix de Guerre.

Princess Mary was 24 years old last April 25. She is the third child of the King and Queen, having been born at York cottage. During the war she was made an honorary Colonel in Chief of the Royal Scots Regiment. She is rosy cheeked, blue-eyed and fair-haired.

2 BOMBS EXPLODED IN CAR OF BELFAST SHIP YARD WORKER

Three Occupants of Conveyance Are Killed, and 18 Others Are Reported Injured.

By the Associated Press.

BELFAST, Nov. 22.—Two bombs were exploded in a tram car full of shipyard workers here this afternoon, killing three of the occupants and injuring 18 others.

Rioting attended the first day's actual functioning of the new Ulster Government, created by the home rule act of last spring. Snipers began their activities in the York street area under cover of dawn, when one man was killed and several others were wounded. Two other deaths occurred later as a result of shooting affrays.

While the special constabulary is under the control of the Northern Parliament, the regular police force is still under the former regime, its future status not having been determined.

As the afternoon wore on several other persons were wounded as the result of snipers' operations. During the shooting of the early hours a bullet pierced a gas pipe in a house on Thompson street and the escaping gas caused the death of three persons, James Macondey, his wife and his niece, who were overcome while asleep.

64 PRISONERS SUFFOCATED IN RAILWAY CARS IN INDIA

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—Sixty-four of 100 Moplah prisoners died from suffocation while being transferred in a closed railroad wagon from Tierur to Bellary, in the Madras Presidency of India, according to a dispatch to the Daily Mail, from Madras. The Government has ordered an inquiry.

Briand to Sail for Home Friday.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Premier Briand, instead of leaving Washington tomorrow evening for New York, where he has engagements Thursday before sailing Friday, will remain here tomorrow evening to dine with Senator Schanzer, head of the Italian delegation. M. Briand will leave for New York early Thursday, where he will receive degrees of doctor of laws from New York and Columbia Universities.

"BIG NINE" APPOINTS COMMITTEE TO WORK ON CHINESE FINANCES

Underwood's Plan for Aiding Revival of Oriental Republic by Fiscal Readjustment Adopted by Unanimous Vote After Discussion.

REMOVAL OF 5% LIMIT ON DUTIES IS FORECAST

British Propaganda for Further Cut in Submarine Tonnage Is Reflected in American Recommendations to Same End From Many Persons in Country.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Consideration of Chinese aspects of the Far Eastern problem was continued today at a meeting of the Washington conference Committe on Pacific and Far Eastern Questions and it was decided to appoint a subcommittee to study Chinese fiscal affairs.

No additional resolutions regarding policies affecting China were adopted today by committee and further consideration of Chinese problems was postponed until 3 o'clock tomorrow, when another meeting of the delegates of the nine Powers' Committee of the Whole will be held.

The conference committee comprising the five principal Powers will meet at 11 o'clock tomorrow, in executive session, for further consideration of naval reduction.

Underwood's Plan Adopted.

Senator Underwood of the American delegation brought forward the proposal today for the committee to examine China's fiscal affairs. His suggestion was said to have been adopted unanimously and Chairman Hughes was authorized to appoint the subcommittee later.

The subcommittee is to take up China's proposal for restoration of tariff autonomy which would remove the present restriction limiting to 5 per cent the duty collectible on China's imports.

In addressing the committee, Senator Underwood was said to have urged a subcommittee for a special study of Chinese revenues, both as to taxes and tariff levies. The question of the present credit of China was said to have been discussed in connection with the Underwood motion.

Little progress on other affairs relating to China was said to have been made at today's meeting. Much of the two-and-a-half hours of the committee meeting was said to have been devoted to discussion of procedure with the various questions relating to China.

China's undertaking in paragraph B of the first point, in her set of principles, not to alienate or lease any portion of her territory or littoral to any Power, was touched upon in a general way at today's meeting, and it is understood that will be one of the problems to be wrestled with at the next meeting. Shantung was not discussed today, nor was Manchuria or Mongolia or any specific proposal other than fiscal.

The following communiqué later was issued:

"The Committee on Pacific and Far Eastern Questions met at the Pan-American Building Nov. 22, at 11 a. m. All the members were present except Baron Shidehara and Signor Meda. The committee discussed the matter of limitations upon the administrative autonomy of China, with particular reference to those connected with revenue, and on Senator Underwood's proposal, decided to appoint a subcommittee consisting of a representative of each of the nine Powers for the purpose of examining facts and stating their conclusions to the full committee, the subcommittee having power to call in such expert opinion as it might desire.

"The committee adjourned until 3 p. m. Wednesday, Nov. 23, 1921."

"Understanding" to Result.

All the present indications point to an "understanding" rather than a treaty as to the form to be taken by the final Far Eastern agreement. Diplomatically such an instrument would be classed along with the "gentlemen's agreements" of the past regarding China and would not require Senate confirmation. There have been hints that the naval reduction agreement might also take that form, but that is said to be one of the details still to be adjusted.

Comparison of China's "bill of rights," with the four principles adopted by the conference yesterday discloses that the latter covers only two and a half of the "10 points" proper and one paragraph of China's introductory statement.

Much Sympathy Shown With Move to Cut Submarines Further

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
The Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Public opinion in America, which brought about the Washington Conference on Limitation of Armaments, is continuing to have a direct and tangible effect on the proceedings.

Standing as a sort of buffer between the American delegates and the people, is the Advisory Committee to the delegates, of which the chairman is former Senator George Sutherland of Utah.

Sutherland said today that hundreds of suggestions had poured in upon the American Commission and had been referred to the Advisory Committee. Virtually all showed warm approval of the Hughes plan for naval armament reduction, but running through many was the idea that there should be a greater slash in submarine tonnage than contemplated by the proposal.

The fact that this idea has taken hold of the public is a tribute to the high efficiency of the British intelligence service at the conference. Propaganda—to use the term in no invidious sense—has been steadily put out by the British in support of their argument that the possibility of "dirty work" by undersea craft should be reduced to a minimum.

All Suggestions Considered.

Sutherland said that all worthwhile suggestions from correspondents were being considered by the advisers who, before the conference reached the stage of finally passing on the Hughes plan, would submit a full report to the American delegates.

The day brought forth the usual pronouncement from the secret session of the Committee on Far Eastern Questions that progress was being made. There were no significant news developments.

It will help to an understanding

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—The first session of the Washington conference featured, as the cinematograph people say, President Harding and Mr. Secretary Hughes; the second day was Mr. Balfour's day. This third, from which I have just come, was the session of M. Briand. The four personalities contrast very strikingly. President Harding was a stately figure making a very noble oration in the best American fashion; Mr. Hughes was hard, exact, clear-cut, very earnest and explicit; Mr. Balfour, slender and stooping, silvery-haired and urbane, made his carefully worded impromptu speech with a care that left no ragged end to a sentence and no gap for applause. All three are taller and neater men than M. Briand, whose mane of hair flows back from his face in leonine style, whose mobile face and fluent gestures reinforce the stirring notes of his wonderful voice. His eloquence was so great that many a Congressman in the gallery above, quite innocent of French, was moved to applause by the sheer grace and music of the performance.

Eloquence could not save the day or the occasion. M. Briand spoke to a gathering that was saturated with skepticism for the cause he had to plead. I watched the quiet, scrutinizing countenances of the six men he turned about to face as he spoke: Root, Lodge and Hughes, as immobile as Judges; Balfour trying to look a sympathetic ally in the face of a discourse that insultingly ignored Great Britain as a factor of the European situation; Lord Lee, obliquely prostrate and judicial; Geddes with that faintly smiling face of his, the mask of an unbeliever. The voice of the orator rose and fell, boomed at them, pleaded, sought to stir them—like seas breaking over rocks. Their still implacable faces, hardly or politely, retained the effect of listening to a special pleader, a special pleader doing his best, his foamy best, with an intolerably bad case.

Compared With Hughes.

M. Briand put before the conference no definite proposals at all. After Mr. Hughes, with that magnificent discourse of his, punctuated by "we propose to scrap," M. Briand was an anticlimax. France proposes to scrap nothing. France does not know how to scrap. She learns nothing and forgets nothing. It is her supreme misfortune. He explained the position of France in a melodious discourse of apologetics and excuses. The French contribution to the disarmament conference is that France has not the slightest intention of disarming. She is reducing her term of service with the colors from three years to two. In a Europe of untrained men, this is not disarmament, but economy.

The great feature of M. Briand's discourse was his pretense of the absolute unimportance of England in European affairs. France, for whom, as Mr. Balfour in a few words of infinite gentleness reminded M. Briand, France, for whom the British empire lost a million dead—very nearly as many men as France herself lost—France, to whose rescue from German attack came Britain, Russia and presently Italy and America, France, M. Briand declared, was alone in the world, friendless and terribly threatened by Germany and Russia. And on the nonsensical assumption of French isolation, M. Briand unfolded a case that was either—I hesitate to consider which—and how shall I put that old alternative?—deficient in its estimate of reality, or else—just special pleading.

The Facts According to Wells.

The plain fact of the case is that France is maintaining a vast army in the face of a disarmed world, and she is preparing energetically for fresh warlike operations in Europe and for war under sea against Great Britain. To excuse this line of action, M. Briand unfolded a fabulous account of the German preparation for a renewal of hostilities; every soldier in the small force of troops allowed to Germany is an officer or noncommissioned officer, so that practically the German army can expand at any moment to millions, and Germany is not morally disarmed because Ludendorff—M. Briand quoted him at some length—is still writing and talking militant nonsense. Even M. Briand has to admit that the present German Government is honest and well-meaning, but it is a weak Government. It is not the real thing. The real Germany is the Germany necessary for M. Briand's argument. And behind Germany is Russia. He conjured up a great phantom of soviet Russia, which would have conquered all Europe but for the French armies and Poland. That iniquitous attack of Poland upon Russia last May was, he assured his six quietened auditors and the rest of us, a violent invasion of Western civilization by Russia. "There are those in Germany," he said, in a voice to make our flesh creep, "who beckoned them on." The French had saved us from that. The French army, with its gallant Senegalese, was the peace-maker and guardian of all Europe.

One listened incredulous. One waited still incredulous to hear it over again from the interpreter. Yes, we were confirmed, he really had said that. Poor exhausted Russia, who saved Paris, desiring nothing but to be left alone, bled white, starving, invaded by a score of subsidized adventurers, invaded from Esthonia, From Poland, from Japan, in Murmansk, in the Crimea, in the Ukraine, on the Volga, incessantly invaded, it is this Russia which has put France upon the offensive—defensive.

Submarines Aimed at Britain.

One is reminded of the navvy who kicked his wife to death to protect himself from her violence. (It is interesting to recall here that one of the Kaiser's favorite excuses for German armament, when it was Germany and not France which aspired to dominate Europe, was his acute dread of the Yellow Peril.) When he talked to the journalists in preparation for this display, M. Briand excused France for wanting submarines in quantity because he said she was liable to attack upon three coasts. But maturer reflection omitted this aspect of the French case from M. Briand's oration. It was too thick even for an American audience. And even Mr. Balfour, with all his charming tenderness for a fellow statesman, could not well have avoided the plain question: "From whom does France anticipate a sea attack?"

France is in about as much danger of an attack upon her three coasts as the United States of America is upon her Canadian frontier. Her ships are as safe upon the sea as a wayfarer on Fifth avenue. If she builds submarines now, she builds them to attack British commerce and for no other reason whatever. All the Ludendorffs and Soviets in the world do not justify a single submarine. Every submarine she launches is almost as direct a breach of peace with Britain as though she were to start target practice at Dover Harbor across the straits, and everyone in England will understand the aim of her action as clearly. M. Briand, in his discourse to the journalists, argued that the Empire of France was as far-flung as that of Britain, that her need to protect her communications was as great. This was in the face of Mr. Balfour's reminder that Britain can feed its people only for seven weeks if its overseas supplies are cut off. France can feed from her own soil all the year round. The argument was good enough for a boy's debating society and M. Briand, who is prepared to scrap nothing else, was at least well advised to scrap that.

Mr. Wells Is Perplexed.

I will confess that I am altogether perplexed by the behavior of France at the present time. I do not understand what she believes she is doing in Europe and I do not understand her position in this conference. Why could she not have co-operated in this conference instead of making it a scene of special pleading? I have already said that the French here seem to be more foreign than any other people and least in touch with the general feeling of the assembly. They seem to have come here as national advocates and special pleaders, without any of that passionate desire to lay the foundations of a world settlement that certainly animates nearly every other delegation. They do not seem to understand how people here regard either the conference or France.

There is indeed a great and enduring enthusiasm for France in America. Gen. Foch has gone about in America as the greatest of heroes and the most popular of figures. He has been overwhelmed by hospitality smothered by every honor America could heap upon him. The French flag is far more in evidence than the British in both New York and Washington. This may easily give French visitors the idea that they are exceptional favorites here and that France can count upon American backing in any quarrels she chooses to pick with the British, or the Germans, or Russians.

There could be no greater error. The enthusiasm for Foch is largely personal; he was the general of all the Allies; the enthusiasm for France is largely traditional and it does not extend to the French nationalist of the present day. America loves, as all liberal and intelligent men throughout the world must love, France, the great liberator of men's minds, France of the Great Revolution, the France of art and light, France the beautiful and the gallant. It is hard to write bitterly of a country that can give the world an Anatole France, sane and smiling, or so brave and balanced a gentleman as the late Robert d'Humieres.

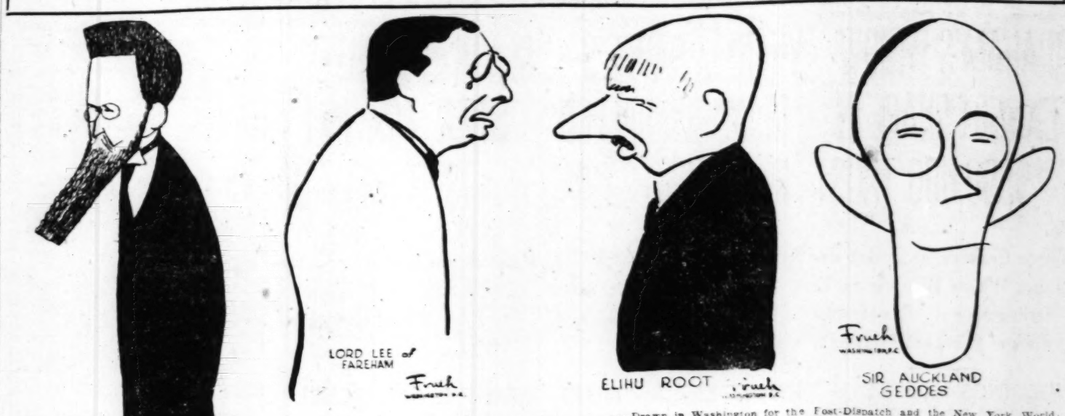

But where is that France today? None of that France has come to the Washington conference, but only an impenitent apologist for three years of sins against the peace of the world, an apologist for national aggression posturing as fear and reckless Greed disguised as Discretion.

French Desire to Dominate.

Here in New York and Washington, I find just the same steady change of opinion about France that is going on in London. I want to write it down as plainly as I can. I want to get it over to my friends in France, because I have loved France greatly and I do not think the French people realize what is going on among the English-speaking peoples. People here want to see Europe recuperating and they are beginning to realize that the chief obstacle to a recuperating Europe is the obstinate French resolve to dominate the Continent, to revive and carry out the antiquated and impossible policy of Louis XIV., maintaining an ancient and intolerable quarrel, setting Pole against German and brewing mischief everywhere in order to divide and rule, instead of entering frankly into a European brotherhood.

Feeling about Germany and Austria is changing here, even more rapidly than in England, to pity and indignation. Feeling about Russia drifts the same way. One detects these under currents in the minds of the most unlikely people. People are recalling the France of Napoleon III., that restless and mischievous France, which came so near to a conflict with America in Mexico and which kept Europe in a fever for a quarter of a century. It is an enormous loss to the Washington conference, it is a misfortune to all the world that the great qualities of the French people, their clear-headedness, their powerful and yet practical imagination, seem at present entirely subordinated to the merely rhetorical and emotional side of the French character.

of the present stage of the conference to compare it with a parliamentary body of lower and upper house. Ony proposition must run the gauntlet first of the delegates in their capacity of a committee—that is, the lower house of the conference—and then of the delegates sitting in plenary session—the upper house. All questions before the conference are still in the lower house.

The interesting question was raised today as to what final, definitive form the decisions of the conference will take. Discussing the point with newspaper men, an official British spokesman said it was conceivable that some entirely new form of document might be invented by the conference for registering its intentions. But whether the document took the form of a treaty of Washington, or a protocol, or a diplomatic "understanding," the main point, he added, was that some agreement should be reached.

British Are Optimistic.

Optimism again marked British and other comment on the probable outcome of the gathering. Britishers said that cablegrams from the home government expressed entire satisfaction with what had been accomplished.

The impression continued to gain ground today that if the present conference is successful it will be followed by other international gatherings to deal with specific problems. If this proves to be the case, the conference will have made a long approach to the setting up of an association of nations. Progressive Senators in their comment on the gathering have stressed the idea that it seems to be headed toward the creation of a League of Nations under another name.

Adoption by the Far Eastern committee yesterday of a set of resolutions with respect to China, agreeing to respect the sovereignty of that country and upholding the principle of the open door, marks an important step forward in the work of the conference. The principles, however, are not to be regarded as anything revolutionary. All have been embodied in treaties between China and the various nations party to the agreement. The significant thing is that the stipulations have been gathered up from various documents and put into one. The objectionsemb put into one. The obligations by that act become joint instead of individual obligations, and presumably all the nations will unite in seeing that the joint bargain is carried out. The conference has yet to apply the principles to concrete issues.

Pledges to Briand Not So Extreme as to Worry the Irreconcilables

By CHARLES MICHELSON

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—The Arms Conference has finally reached a stage familiar to everybody who has followed the course of an international congress. Everything is in the air and is being held there with a view to compromises later on.

This does not mean that every question will be satisfactorily settled or that confusion has overtaken the conference. The various delegations know their way through the apparent mazes. The intangible state of the questions is simply like the dough that in the baking becomes firm bread.

This little explanation is necessary lest a recital of the complications that developed yesterday should convey the idea that everything had gone to pot.

The striking and picturesque feature was Premier Briand's eloquent explanation of France's perils and the reduction in the army she intends to make—which, though substantial, is not sensational, as is explained elsewhere in the Post-Dispatch today—and the implication that the other countries would stand by her if her peril materialized into attack. Outside of the conference oratory were a number of matters of greater importance to the success of the session than land disarmament.

Naval Proposals Mixed Again.

Our naval proposals which were "accepted in principle" the other day, are fairly in the mixing vat. We stand by our capital ship proportion of "5-5-3," and nowhere along the American line is there any suggestion of weakening. England is with us as far as "5-5" goes, but is silent about the "3."

In other words, she accepts the plan of ultimate equality in our navy and hers, says no more about the interruption of the 10-year navy holiday and will fight it out with us in committee about submarines and cruisers, but she declines to express an opinion as to the merit of our proposal for Japan's navy.

Japan has braced up and last night let it be known that she will never agree to hold her capital ships to 60 per cent of the number allowed to the United States and to England, conveying the intimation that regardless of what happens she must have 70 per cent and thinks she ought to have 75 per cent.

The Chinese Snarl.

Then the Chinese questions are as well snarled as ever; the Conference Committee on Chinese and Far Eastern affairs did, it is true, adopt a resolution embracing four general principles for the discussion of Chinese affairs, at the meeting of the committee on Far Eastern and Pacific questions, but today every delegation and its satellites are quarreling over what Elihu Root, who introduced the resolutions, really meant.

The resolutions were signed by all the nations at the conference except China, she not desiring to pass on a policy affecting her. Every convention of the many that have been made about the Far East has carried a provision for respecting Chinese sovereignty—and Japan and the other Powers have helped themselves just the same.

The second declaration might mean that everybody was pledged to get out of China. Otherwise, how is she going to be left unembarrassed to work out a stable government?

The third proposal is simply a paraphrase of the "open-door" policy, which is no older than the violation of the principles it enunciated—their special interests, etc.—would bar the Japanese, for example, from mixing in the existing political turmoil in China, or intervening if the fighting becomes general, except, of course, that Japan, if she did mix in, would never admit a selfish motive. The Chinese accusation is that Japan fomented a lot of the discord for her own profit.

General as are Mr. Root's four specifications, they seem to accomplish one definite result; they junk the Lansing-Ishii agreement recognizing Japan's special interests in China and also abolish Japan's "Monroe Doctrine for Asia."

That the Japanese do not regard the proposals as effective against them is evidenced by the alacrity with which they voted for them with all the other Powers represented at the conference.

All along the Japanese have been contending for general declarations instead of specific enactments on the definite Chinese problems. The resolutions are right in their line, particularly as they do not refer back to anything done in the past.

Manchuria and Mongolia?

The first big fight will come when the attempt is made to resolve the general principles, the obvious start of which process is the delimitation of the boundaries of China. Japan has never in any of the exchanges admitted that Manchuria or Mongolia were Chinese territory. If Japan is given a look-in anywhere it will be in Manchuria.

The Anglo-Japanese alliance bobbed up again today. A few days ago this was regarded as marked for the scrap heap by consent of the British certainly and the Japanese probably. Now we are back to the policy of Lloyd George at the imperial council, where he explained that while he was not wedded to the alliance, he did not wish to offend Japan.

Likewise England is again pressing for a three-nation agreement, the United States to be the third in the Asiatic concert, or even an understanding among the five great Powers represented at the conference to guarantee the peace of the Orient.

The British say there has been no change in their attitude. If that statement is correct there is not a correspondent in Washington competent to interview a British statesman without an interpreter.

So all along the line the conference concert it out of tune.

The onlookers are not even agreed as to what Briand got. From a diplomatic point of view the plenary session was a vast success. Premier Briand is able to return to France with what sounds like a pledge that in the event of her being again attacked by Germany she will have the support of England and the United States.

Mr. Hughes' Pleasant Phrases.

In our case particularly the pledge is vague enough so that the people who always have heart failure at the suggestion of "entangling alliances" cannot point their alarmed fingers at Secretary Hughes, for, taken out of the atmosphere of the French Premier's speech and divested of the embracing gesture that accompanied it, there is nothing in what the head of the American delegation said to bring the slightest blush to the cheek of the most timid irreconcilable.

375,000 FRENCH TROOPS AND 150,000 COLONIALS UNDER BRIAND'S PLAN

Provision for 18 Months' Service Means About One and a Half Classes of 250,000 at Time.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.

By the program enunciated by Premier Briand, the French army will be reduced from a pre-war total of 900,000 men to about 525,000.

This number is composed of 375,000 Frenchmen, resident in France proper, and 150,000 colonials, the vast bulk of whom are Moroccans, Algerians, Senegalese and Indo-Chinese.

Thus the "metropolitan" or home army, which was 750,000 before the war, is cut in half, while the colonial army remains at its former total, and if the Government pleases, can be increased.

The distribution of troops will be roughly as follows: 300,000 in France proper, 85,000 on the Rhine, 15,000 in Upper Silesia, 35,000 in Syria, France's mandated territory; 65,000 in Algeria and Morocco; 25,000 in Senegal, Madagascar, Indo-China and elsewhere.

The reduction will be accomplished when the French Parliament votes the bill now before it, and sure of enactment into law, decreasing the period of compulsory military service in the "metropole" from three years to 18 months. This act provides only one and one-half classes, instead of three classes under arms at one time. A class numbers about 250,000 men.

PRESIDENT TO GRANT PARDONS TO WAR LAW VIOLATORS

Cabinet Decides on Fairly General Amnesty, Subject to Review by Executive.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—President Harding soon will begin a study of the records of all persons convicted of wartime offenses with a view to the extension of pardons.

The subject of pardons for violators of war laws was considered at today's Cabinet meeting and afterward it was learned a policy of extending a fairly general amnesty to all such offenders was approved, contingent on review by the President.

It was said officially there would be no sweeping proclamation releasing all persons convicted under the espionage and military laws and each case would be considered on its merits. No persons who have advocated property destruction and industrial offenses will be released, but a particular effort will be made to clear up the status of military offenders, consisting of service men who infracted disciplinary regulations.

The Department of Justice has been asked to prepare a digest on each case for the President's decision.

Later it was announced the President had commuted the 10-year sentence of Emil Herman, confined at McNeil's Island, Washington, to expire Dec. 24. He was convicted in Seattle, Wash., in June, 1918, of violation of the espionage act.

GEN. BRUCE TO HEAD MOUNT EVEREST EXPEDITION IN 1922

LONDON, Nov. 22.—Col. Sir Francis E. Younghusband, president of the Royal Geographic Society, announced last night that Brigadier-General Charles Bruce, who is well acquainted with the region, has accepted the leadership for next year of the expedition which will attempt to reach the summit of Mount Everest, in the Himalayas, the highest peak in the world.

Col. Younghusband said the time was past when Brigadier-General Bruce could be expected personally to reach the summit of the mountain, but that the idea of climbing Mount Everest had been in his mind for 28 years. The General has had wide experience in mountaineering in the Himalayas and none was better fitted than he to handle the Himalayan people.

LOAN CERTIFICATES FORGED

Stock Exchange Issues Notice Regarding French Paper.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—The New York Stock Exchange today issued a general notice of the existence of forged temporary certificates of J. P. Morgan & Co. for the French Republic 7½ per cent 20-year external loan bonds, due 1941.

J. P. Morgan & Co., fiscal agents of the French Government, declined to comment on the announcement.

Blue Dog Star at Art Show.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—A living work of art by nature won the admiration of the fashionable people who thronged the exhibition in the Alpine Club Gallery of paintings by Sir John and Lady Lavery, at which the latter, who was Miss Hazel Martin of Chicago, made a triumphant public debut as a painter. A chronicler for a newspaper writes: "Lady Diana Cooper's blue Bedlington dog, which accompanied her, came in for much admiration, as did his mistress."

JAPANESE UNYIELDING 'AS CHUNK OF FLINT' IN DEMAND FOR NAVAL RATIO, 10-10-7

Tokio Means to Hold Its New Superdreadnought, Too, says Jiji Shimpo Correspondent, as National Symbol of Sacrifice.

By ADACHI KINNOSUKE.
Washington Correspondent of the Jiji Shimpo of Tokio.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Naval authorities here with the Japanese delegation deny flatly and definitely the Tokio report that the Navy Department of Japan has requested the builders of the battleship Tosa to rush work on it. It is certain that such requests or orders were never issued from here. None of the Japanese delegation, including Admiral Kato, the Minister of the Navy, know anything about it.

They hold it is utterly inconceivable that a request of that sort should be made to contractors without the Japan naval authorities here in Washington at least being consulted about it. There must be some error about it, the Japanese authorities claim. If orders were issued, it would be more likely of the opposite character.

On the naval ratio the Japanese officers want 10-10-7 at the very lowest. On this point they are about as yielding as a chunk of flint. The newspapers' talk of the emphatic and unyielding attitude of the American authorities on their proposed ratio of 5-5-3 does not make any particular impression on our naval men. For one thing, they don't believe a word of it. They simply cannot believe that the American Government could take such a stand.

They cannot see why America should object to a 70 per cent ratio for Japan, and for the following reason: It makes not the slightest difference to the American navy whether the Japanese naval strength be 70 per cent or 60 per cent of the American naval power. In either case the Japanese navy is a joke as an aggressive weapon against the American navy.

If Japan dreamed of ever attacking the American navy she would hold out for 17 capital ships for herself against America's 10. And in that ratio there is not too extravagant a margin of safety, according to our naval authorities.

Proof Japan Offers.

The bare fact, they say, that Japan never aspired even to equal the American navy is the best of all proofs that she has never been mad enough to think of such a thing. To say that Japan is willing to limit her naval power to 70 per cent of the American strength is another way of saying that she will not attack America in any circumstances.

While the ratio of 70 per cent for Japan does not make the slightest difference to America, it makes all the difference in the world to Japan. For, according to our naval authorities, that is the minimum of naval strength essential for the national defense of Japan. In proof they cite many things, this among others: Some 55 naval engagements were fought since the battle of Dover in 1652 in which the ratio of naval contestants were known. Out of the number there were only five—that is, less than 10 per cent—battles which resulted in a victory for a naval power having less than 70 per cent of that of its opponent.

If Japan were to agree to make her naval power less than 70 per cent it simply means, in the light of the undisputable historic facts, that she is giving herself a chance of winning about five times out of 55.

Case of Superdreadnought.

As for the new superdreadnought Mutsu, Japan is going to hold to it in all probability. In fact, in her case our delegation has little choice about the matter. This time it is not the militarists who would insist on it, but the people. All arguments which technical experts of the United States may or may not be able to present against it being saved would have about as much effect as the "spring breeze on a horse's ear," as the Japanese say.

The Mutsu is not a warship—to the sentimental imagination of the people of Japan. She is a symbol of national self-sacrifice in steel. A millionaire girl baby may throw away any number of expensive French dolls without the slightest heartache. The first real French doll which a wee girl of the proletariat gets has quite a different meaning, especially in the affection of its lucky proprietor. Japan is no spoiled daughter of the rich—the Mutsu is one of her rare and really expensive toys.

At home we have a common saying which runs somewhat like this: "Nippon builds her battleships through the fingers of her factory girls."

In Popular Imagination.

In the popular imagination of Japan the Mutsu is more a crystallization of the sweat and tears and blood of millions of toilers than it is a fighting machine. America may persuade Japan to scrap her willingly, but before she could achieve this she will have to convince some 10,000,000 men and women that the addition of the Mutsu to the list of Japanese ships which the American armament limitation proposal allowed Japan would convert the Japanese navy from a defensive into an offensive weapon. And that is really a big order—even from purely a technical point of view.

Now, the Japanese people have always understood that America asked the other great Powers of the world to come here for just one purpose—to talk things over among them and, if possible, work out some practical measure, though roughly, satisfactory to all the parties concerned, for the limitation of naval armaments.

SHIDEHARA TOO ILL FOR CONFERENCE WORK

Responsibility of Japanese Delegation Devolves for the Time Upon Admiral Kato.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—The condition of Baron Shidehara, the Japanese Ambassador, who has been ill for several days, has not improved as expected, it is learned, and, although his condition is not serious, he may be unable to resume his work as a delegate to the Washington conference. His illness was caused by overwork and nervous collapse, complicated by malaria.

As a result of the illness, the responsibility of the Japanese delegation has devolved upon Admiral Baron Kato, who had counted upon Baron Shidehara to attend to diplomatic questions, particularly as affecting the Far East.

In the circumstances, Admiral Kato is turning for diplomatic assistance to M. Hanihara, the vice minister for foreign affairs, who came to Washington as one of the chief advisers to the delegation. Hanihara was for 11 years secretary of the embassy here.

FLORISSANT MAN HELD FOR CORONER IN MURDER CASE

John Rappuie Arrested and Taken to Jail at Clayton After Bloodhounds Follow Trail to His Home.

HAD CALLED ON SLAIN MAN'S FIANCEE

Parents of Agnes Aubuchon, Engaged to Wed Francis Fee, Objected to Rappuie's Attentions to Her.

John Rappuie of Florissant was held at the St. Louis County jail in Clayton today on orders of the Coroner for further questioning in regard to the death of Francis Fee of 3116A North Grand avenue, St. Louis, who was murdered Sunday night after leaving the home of his fiancee, Miss Agnes Aubuchon, in Florissant. He has denied any knowledge of the matter.

Rappuie is 30 years old, and is said to have Indian blood. He has been working as a truck driver for the County Highway Commissioner. He was found by a Deputy Sheriff at work on the St. Charles road at noon yesterday, and was taken to Clayton for questioning. This was after the deputies had learned that Rappuie had been attentive to Miss Aubuchon at times, and that her parents had forbidden him to enter the Aubuchon home.

While Rappuie was being questioned at Clayton, by the county authorities and by Lieut. Walton of the St. Louis homicide squad, bloodhounds from St. Elmo, Ill., were being taken to the scene of the murder.

Bloodhounds Follow Steps.

The Dogs, on arriving after dark, took the trail in the middle of Harrison avenue, also known as Mary avenue, the street in Florissant along which Fee was walking after he left the Aubuchon home. They took the direction of footprints, which had been noticed previously, and went over a field, then back to Harrison avenue, then east for a distance of about two city blocks and north for about three blocks, then a short distance east to Rappuie's house. They stood barking on the porch of Rappuie's home. The vicinity of the killing had been kept clear of intrusion during the day, in anticipation of the bloodhounds' hunt.

Miss Aubuchon said that Rappuie took her for a short ride in his automobile Sunday afternoon, and that she told him she expected to be married to Fee in two or three weeks. Fee had been calling at the home twice a week for more than two years. The young woman said Rappuie did not seem particularly affected by the announcement of her marriage plans.

Body Found Yesterday.

As was told yesterday, Fee's body was found at 5:30 yesterday morning near Harrison avenue and Graham road, and a short distance from the street car line. The hands were tied behind him with a cord, and death had been caused by cuts and crushing blows on the skull. Although one of the trousers pockets was inside out, the other contained $6, and jewelry with the body was undisturbed.

Fee, who was an electrician employed by an incandescent lamp company, was one of four sons of Mrs. Bridget Fee, a widow. He went to Florissant late Sunday afternoon, to make one of his regular calls on his fiancee, and left her home at 10 p. m. Persons passing from the street car line, a short time afterward, heard groans from the roadside.

The funeral of Fee will be held at 9:30 a. m. Thursday in Holy Name Church, 2039 East Grand avenue, followed by interment in Calvary Cemetery.

FIANCEE OF MAN WHO WAS MURDERED MYSTERIOUSLY

said, and he was standing in the moonlight. Gardner interrupted, asking him to repeat the last word. Prosecuting Attorney Mueller interposed. "He said moonlight, not moonshine," and Werremeyer gravely affirmed that that was just what he said, and that he had not mentioned moonshine.

"I had my hands full," Werremeyer said a minute later, and Gardner demanded, "Full of what?" Werremeyer proceeded to relate that, on leaving, he took four five-gallon cans of the moonshine whisky, to be placed in his courtroom vault as evidence.

Werremeyer was asked about a complaint he had made to Willmann, at the farm, that Deputy Goericke had tried to "bump off" Werremeyer. He said that Goericke, when upbraiding him, moved close to him, and that he felt what he thought was a revolver. He said he called on the Sheriff for protection, and that Willmann replied: "It would be a damned poor man who wouldn't stick up for his boss."

"What am I going to do?" he said he asked Willmann, "stay here and be bumped off?" He said the Sheriff replied, "Use your own judgment." Werremeyer was carrying his own revolver at the time.

On cross-examination, Werremeyer was asked about his connection with a billiard hall and bowling alleys at 6225 Easton avenue, and said he ran the place up to July 1.

Is Asked About "Moonshine."

"Did you sell moonshine there?" Gardner demanded. "No," said Werremeyer.

"Didn't you sell Elmer Carson, a linotype operator, a gallon of moonshine for $10, in your office in the courthouse?" "No," was the answer.

"Didn't you arrange, in your pool room, to sell Earl Cox of 5343 Easton avenue, a quart of moonshine, and didn't you have it delivered to Cox on the Courthouse square, in Clayton?" "No."

"Did you give Henry Kerth, real estate dealer, a drink of moonshine in your courtroom?" To this Werremeyer answered, "Yes."

"Where did you get it?"

"Just like all the rest of them out here got it."

"Wasn't it whisky taken in a raid?"

"Yes, it was given me by Constable Jules Schoenbein; he got it in a raid on the Lay road."

"How much did Schoebein give you?"

"Two quarts."

"Did you tell Kerth you could furnish him all he wanted, at $10 to $12 a gallon?"

"No, but I may have said I knew a man who could supply him."

"You kept the evidence in the courtroom, and took a drink whenever you wanted it?"

Admits Taking Drinks.

"Yes, I took a drink when I wanted it."

"Weren't you afraid you would drink up all the evidence?"

"No danger of that."

"Is that why you took 20 gallons from Wolfsberger's, when a half pint would have been enough for evidence?"

"That was nothing; sometimes the Constables bring in more than that, as many as eight cans. I could have taken 31 gallons there, instead of 20, if I had wanted to."

"Why didn't you?"

"I wish I had."

"Would you have taken more if you had been alone?"

"No."

"Why did Goericke object to taking it away?"

"He was afraid. I wasn't. I had authority."

"If that was so, why didn't you raid the place between the 9th and 17th?"

"The Sheriff knew of the place, and I was leaving it to him, to see what he would do."

Prosecuting Attorney Mueller brought out the fact that, under the State prohibition law, a Justice of the Peace has no authority to enforce the law, this authority belonging to the Sheriff. Werremeyer said he had heard this before, in the course of depositions in Gardner's office.

Gardner asked Werremeyer if he told Wolfsberger, on one of his visits, to "go ahead," and said to Italians running the still, "Everything's sitting pretty, boys; go ahead." He denied this.

Gardner asked Werremeyer about a previous admission that he had moonshine whisky at his home, and Werremeyer said the only such whisky at his home was part of a quart taken from his office, this being from the raid on the Lay road.

Saw Bottle Drop, He Says.

Werremeyer's statement as to courthouse officials who got the moonshine product, and his assertion that Gardner got a bottle, and the resulting discussion with Gardner, then followed. He finally said, as to Gardner, that he had seen a bottle drop from under his coat, in front of the bank in Clayton last March, and that it was white whisky.

"I don't drink in the daytime."

"Begin at sundown, eh?"

"I drink when I'm through my work."

"Moonshine by moonlight, eh?"

"I don't drink much of that stuff."

"How many drinks had you had July 9?"

"I took two drinks in the two hours that I was waiting for Willmann."

Transfer of Cans Brought Up.

"Were you not so drunk that you could hardly stand; so drunk that when the Sheriff left, you couldn't carry those cans to the automobile?" Werremeyer said he was not drunk, but Gardner insisted that the Italians carried the cans for him.

"What right had you to carry your revolver?" Gardner demanded.

"I was going out on a raid."

"Then why didn't you make a raid?"

"I had got enough of it."

"But you had only 20 gallons."

Prosecuting Attorney Mueller objected, at this point, to the "vaudeville" in progress, and Gardner said he should blame the witness for this.

Werremeyer said he told a Post-Dispatch reporter about the occurrence at the Wolfsberger farm, but did not tell Prosecuting Attorney Mueller until after the raid of July 17. The witness said he remarked to Deputy Sheriff Stuckman that if a raid was not made within a few days, he would go out and make it himself.

"On the day of the raid," he said, "I went to the Majestic Hotel to get Federal Prohibition Agent Hoover. I met Fred Essen (former Congressman and a Republican boss in the county) in the lobby, and he had Hoover paged. On our way out we stopped at my former home and picked up the Post-Dispatch reporter I had talked to previously. The Post-Dispatch had the story first the next afternoon," he continued in reply to a question. "The Globe-Democrat did not have it that morning."

When asked about his hesitancy in making a statement to the Prosecuting Attorney, Werremeyer said he was afraid at first that he might be rendered liable for costs in the proceeding, but that, "after the Post-Dispatch came out with the story in full," he decided to make the statement to Mueller, thinking that if he did not back up his declarations, people would think him a liar.

Former Reporter Testifies.

William H. Pfeiffer, now a real estate salesman, who was formerly a Post-Dispatch reporter, and to whom Werremeyer referred in his testimony, testified briefly as to witnessing the raid on the night of July 17, after having received advance information from Werremeyer.

$12,000 Surprise for Carpenter.

FORT SMITH, Ark., Nov. 22.—George W. Miller, a carpenter, has been notified by a local bank to call and take possession of $12,000, which has been received from a Western bank to his credit for mining stock bought 16 years ago. Miller says he intends settling down on a chicken othy in the Justice's stable.

FIANCEE TELLS OF LANDRU'S LOVE, FAINTS ON STAND

Mlle. Segret Stands by "Bluebeard," Testifying for 45 Minutes, Describing His Delicate Attentions.

By the Associated Press.

VERSAILLES, Nov. 22.—Immense crowds, calling to mind the Versailles of the most famous days of the peace conference sessions, today traveled from Paris in the hope of hearing the testimony of Fernande Segret, "Blue Beard" Landru's eleventh alleged fiancee, and the only one, according to the prosecution, to escape death at his hands. Landru is facing the charge of having murdered 10 women and the son of one of them.

Mlle. Segret staunchly stood by her former lover, telling the Judge and jury a story of simple love and delicate attentions bestowed upon her by the man accused of strangling, cutting to bits and cremating 10 other women.

Stove Produced in Court.

The small stove, in which the prosecution contends Landru incinerated his alleged victims, was produced in court for the first time today since the trial opened more than two weeks ago. The stove was examined by the jury with most minute attention.

The prisoner's physical condition is beginning to weaken under the strain of the trial. He is so feeble that the gendarmes, who accompany him to and from the courtroom, told the Associated Press correspondent that he had to be helped to walk across the small courtyard separating the jail from the courthouse. But if Landru is physically weakening, his nerve seems to be undaunted. He told the correspondent, who managed to approach him before court opened:

"My health is poor and my eyesight bad, very bad. But I'll see this thing through. I have no complaint against Judge Gilbert and Prosecutor Godefroy, but I do regret the inefficiency of the police, who are unable to find these missing women."

At this point three good homored gendarmes almost reluctantly ended the conversation by leading the prisoner into court. Landru and his guards appeared to be on excellent terms.

Woman Faints on Stand.

After 45 minutes' testimony, Mlle. Segret fainted on the stand and court adjourned session.

Landru showed emotion for the first time while today's witnesses recalled their relations.

The defense today announced that the plea of Landru's insanity had been abandoned. This action followed the giving of expert testimony to the effect that Landru, since 1904, when he was suffering from melancholia, had gradually grown stronger and now was fully normal.

The experts testified that hypnotism could not have resulted in destroying the personality of his alleged victims in such a way, that, although alive, they were ignorant of their identity, as has been claimed by the defense.

Bones of the two dogs belonging to Mlle. Marchandier, one of the 11 alleged victims of Landru, again figured prominently in yesterday's session of Landru's trial.

Landru, having admitted that he had killed the dogs, Judge Gilbert insistently pressed the prisoner to explain in what manner.

"I strangled them," Landru finally shouted. Then he explained that he had used a waxed cord in the strangling process.

Prosecutor Godefroy, who insisted that this particular point be brought out, declared it would aid the prosecution in proving that Landru, during fits of extreme frenzy, had strangled the missing women, had cut them up into bits and then, after regaining his normal state of mind, had sold a few cheap belongings of his victims. This was done, the prosecutor argued, to give the appearance that his relations with the women were merely commercial transactions.

Inspector Riboulet told the jury that every hamlet, village, town and city in France had been gone over by the local police for traces of the women who had disappeared, but that the results of their investigations had been nothing.

The prosecution produced a witness who testified he had sold Landru four dozen hacksaw blades soon after the accused man took up his residence at Gambais. The theory of the prosecution is that Landru used these saws in connection with the crimes with which he is charged.

The crush of people to gain admision to the courtroom after the 3 o'clock recess yesterday was so great that many women fainted. Two women hurled themselves against the bayonets of the soldiers keeping guard at the courtroom door. One of them was severely wounded, while the other suffered slight injuries.

Load of Hay for Wedding Fee.

NORTHUMBERLAND, Pa., Nov. 22.—Michael P. Tierney, a Northumberland Justice, believes he is the only Squire in the world who was ever paid for a wedding fee with a load of hay. A young couple from a nearby township, whose names he refuses to give, wanted him to marry them, but declared they had no money. The bridegroom offered a load of hay instead, and Tierney, thinking it a joke, agreed. The young man later puat a load of tim-

ROOT'S 4 CHINESE PRINCIPLES 'VAGUE AND INDEFINITE'

Correspondent Points Out That Kato Says, "Perhaps There Are Many Ways of Interpreting Them.."

BY CHARLES MERZ.
Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—The committee on Far Eastern questions of the armament limitation conference went back to Methusaleh yesterday. It resorted to none of the "new style" definite diplomacy which characterized Hughes' opening of the conference with his program for scrapping warships. Instead, it went back to the earliest known methods of attempting to handle Far Eastern questions. It adopted four "principles" so general that they could be printed on a wreath and used as Christmas postcards.

These principles were proposed by Root, on behalf of the American delegation, and after discussion and amendment they were adopted by all nine of the powers in the conference, with the exception of China. As it was an expression of the attitude of the Powers towards her, China herself could not participate in adopting them.

The four general principles were adopted "to guide the committee in its further investigation in regard to China." Only future deliberations of the committee will explain what this means.

Baron Kato put his finger precisely on the point last evening Asked for an explanation of one of the "four principles" immediately after the committee meeting, the head of the Japanese delegation declared:

"Perhaps there are many ways of interpreting these principles. Ask the experts."

Sovereignty and Integrity.

On various occasions the experts have been asked for their interpretation of two of these principles. The first, that declaring the intention of the Powers to "respect the sovereignty and the territorial integrity of China," has been adopted many times. What is lacking in the version, as has so regularly been lacking in the past, is a concrete definition of that China which everyone in the conference has been so prompt to recognize. Does it, to be specific, include Manchuria and Mongolia?

The Chinese turn the pages of their book of treaties, and note the fact that never has the Chinese republic obtained from Japan a definition of China which included Manchuria and Mongolia specifically.

It is not a question here of whether Manchuria and Mongolia ought or ought not to be regarded as essential parts of China. It may be the intention of the conference to define what it means by "China." If so, it has recognized something before defining it.

The second of the four general principles is not so familiar in the annals of the East as its predecessor, but it more than makes up for its youth in vagueness. China is to have "the fullest and most unembarrased opportunity to develop and maintain for herself an effective and stable government.

View the Chinese Take.

The Chinese assert this necessarily will involve abrogation of treaties based on the 21 demands. It will also be necessary to give China control over her own tariffs, they assert, for a larger national income is vitally needed if China is to have "an effectiv and stable government."

Does this second principle adopted by the conference mean the abrogation of the 21 demands and China's right to control her own tariffs and the various other rights which the Chinese claim it ought to mean? Or does it signify nothing in particular?

There is the same sort of vagueness about the third point on the list. The Powers are going to establish and maintain "equal opportunity for the commerce and industry of all nations throughout China."

The Powers have been promising that to each other, and to China, for the last 20 years. At least 30 times specifically they have recognized the same identical principle. Yet there is a general acknowledgment in the East, among foreigners and merchants, that the principle is not being put into practice.

Careful on Infringement.

The last point on the list of four principles is obviously one drawn in an effort to fit the existing situation. The Powers agree to take no advantage of "present conditions" in China. That is, they will not step in while China is politically in chaos. They will not "seek special rights or privileges" which would injure the rights of friendly nations. That is, Japan will not infringe on Britain, or Britain on Japan, or either of them on France or the United States.

Cudahy Employes Accept Cut.

By the Associated Press.

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 22.—Agreement to accept a wage reduction, as have other employes in the packing industry of the country, was reached today by Cuhahy Packing Co. workers through employe representatives of their plant conference board, it was announced by the company here today.

Four Points on Which Powers Agree in Work on Chinese Question

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.

THE following communique was issued yesterday after the Committee on Pacific and Far Eastern Questions adjourned:

"The Committee on Pacific and Far Eastern Questions met at the Pan-American Building Nov. 21 at 4 o'clock p. m. All the members were present except Baron Shidehara, the Japanese Ambassador, who is ill, and Meda of Italy.

"The committee discussed a series of representations prepared for their consideration by Senator Root, setting forth the general principles to guide the committee in its further investigation in regard to China, which after full discussion and amendment were adopted in the following form:

"It is the firm intention of the Powers attending this conference hereinafter mentioned, to-wit: the United States of America, Belgium, the British Empire, France, Italy, Japan, The Netherlands and Portugal:

"1. To respect the sovereignty, the independence and the territorial and administrative integrity of China.

"2. To provide the fullest and most unembarrassed opportunity to China to develop and maintain for herself an effective and stable government.

"3. To use their influence for the purpose of effectively establishing and maintaining the principle of equal opportunity for the commerce and industry of all nations throughout the territory of China.

"4. To refrain from taking advantage of the present conditions in order to seek special rights or privileges which would abridge the rights of the subjects or citizens of friendly states and from countenancing action inimical to the security of such states.

"The committee adjourned to meet at 11 o'clock tomorrow."

GIRL AT ARBUCKLE 'PARTY' DESCRIBES WHAT OCCURRED

Showgirls' Stories of Arbuckle Party at Hotel.

Zey Prevost, also known as Zey Prevon, and Alice Blake, on the stand yesterday, described the Hotel St. Francis party, which they attended and at which Arbuckle is alleged to have fatally hurt the actress. Both show girls said Miss Rappe moaned, "I am dying, he hurt me." Neither, however, could say that she mentioned Arbuckle's name.

Miss Prevost was the second witness called. She was neatly attired in a blue tailored suit and a hat trimmed with gold lace and jet spangles. She is blessed with a more than ordinary share of good looks. Mrs. Arbuckle surveyed her with interest and there was much craning of necks on the part of the spectators. Miss Prevost said she knew Miss Rappe and was acquainted with Arbuckle, and that she went to his rooms at the hotel, room 1220, between 1 and 1:30 on Sept. 5. There, she said, she met Mrs. Delmont, Lowell Sherman, Al Semnacher and the others of the party.

Assistant District Attorney Leo Friedman, conducting the examination of Miss Prevost, asked:

"How was the defendant, Arbuckle, dressed?"

"Pajamas, bathrobe and slippers," answered Miss Prevost.

"Where was Virginia Rappe sitting?"

"On a settee."

"Where was Arbuckle sitting?"

"On a chair."

"Were they next to one another?"

"Yes."

"Were there any drinks?"

"Yes, on the table."

"What were they?"

"Gin and orange juice."

"While you were in the room did you drink anything?"

"No."

"What did you see Miss Rappe do?"

"She left the room and went into room 1221."

"What time was that?"

"I don't know; I guess between half past 2 and 3."

"Who was present then?"

"Mr. Arbuckle, Alice Blake, Lowell Sherman and myself."

"What did Miss Rappe do in 1221?"

"She knocked on the door of the bathroom."

"Did anybody answer her?"

"Yes; Mrs. Delmont told her to go to the other room."

"What did she do then?"

"She entered 1219."

"What did the defendant do?"

"He followed her in."

"What did you do?"

"I went into 1221 a few seconds and then came back into 1220."

"Who was in 1220 when you came back?"

"There was no one there."

Questioned About Drinking.

"How many drinks did Miss Rappe have before she left the room?"

"I never noticed."

"Eating and drinking."

"Was there any music?"

"Arbuckle sent down for a Victrola."

"Was there any singing?"

"Not then."

"Any singing after Miss Rappe went into room 1219?"

"I can't remember."

"What happened after Miss Rappe went in 1219?"

"Mrs. Delmont went over to the door and knocked."

"How long afterward?"

"I can't remember—about half an hour."

"Would you say it was between half an hour and an hour?"

"Yes."

"What else did Mrs. Delmont do?"

"She kicked on the door and called out, 'Open the door; I want to talk to Virginia a minute.'"

"What happened then?"

"Mr. Arbuckle opened the door."

"How was he dressed?"

"In a bath robe and pajamas."

"What was he doing?"

"Fumbling with his robe."

"Did he say anything?"

"Not that I remember."

"What was the appearance of his face?"

"Red."

"What did you do?"

"I went into 1219."

"What did the defendant do before you went into 1219?"

"He took off his bathrobe."

"I said: 'You better put your bathrobe on again; you'll catch cold.'"

"What was Virginia Rappe doing when you went into 1219?"

"Lying on the bed."

"What was her appearance?"

"She was fully dressed and her hair was hanging down."

"What was she doing?"

"Moaning and moving around on the bed."

Girl Said She Was Dying.

"What did she say?"

"She said: 'I am dying; I am dying. I'm going to die.'"

"What did she do then?"

"She sat up on the bed and started to tear her waist."

"What else did she do?"

"She took off her stockings and underwear."

"Did the defendant enter 1219 again?"

"Yes."

"What did the defendant do?"

"He grabbed the sleeve of her waist. He was fooling with her and laughing."

"What did you do?"

"I helped undress Miss Rappe."

"Who else helped?"

"Mrs. Delmont."

"Did you remove all her clothes?"

"Yes."

"What else did Virginia Rappe say?"

"Nothing."

Friedman endeavored to question Miss Prevost as to further remarks by Virginia Rappe, but the Court sustained objections from the defense based on the ground that she had already answered.

Continuing the examination, Friedman asked: "What did you do next?"

"We moved her to the other bed."

"What did you do for her?"

"We gave her some bicarbonate of soda."

"What did you do then?"

"We gave her a cold bath."

"Did she say anything?"

"Yes, she said 'he hurt me.'"

Miss Prevost said that Miss Rappe cried out and made considerable noise and that Arbuckle came in again from the next room.

"What did Arbuckle say?" asked Friedman.

"He told her to shut up. He said he would throw her out of the window if she didn't stop yelling."

"What did he do?"

"He put ice on her body."

After the application of the ice, Miss Prevost testified Miss Rappe "came to" somewhat. She concluded her direct testimony by stating that after the cold bath Miss Rappe was removed to room 1227.

Misses Prevost and Blake Failed in Movies.

Such is the peculiar nature of the case that the crowds in the courtroom expected when the States two witnesses were called to see oversmart and over-sophisticated young women of the stagey type. They saw nothing of the sort. They saw two girls who might have stepped in from any main street of any middle-class city where ultra modernity is the rage. Miss Prevost and Alice Blake suggest in manner and appearance not the stage or the higher rolling movie world, but the rather piteous class of American young women who put on their sophistocation as they put on their face powder, using one disguise about as thickly as the other. Their clothes are the clothes of main street and so is their ordered mixture of sensitiveness and recklessness and their profound ignorance of the changeless actualities of life and their clipped and inelastic vocabulary. Both were stage and movie struck and each tried and failed in the movies. Miss Blake, whose testimony was resumed this morning, sings in a middle-class restaurant. She saw less of Fatty's party than Zey Prevost saw. Both girls are only a little over 20.

Answer Amuses Hearers.

There was a slight hum of amusement when McNab, trying to draw out a description of Arbuckle's demeanor, asked:

"Was he coherent?"

"No," said Miss Prevost in a small and tired voice, "none of the people there used vulgar language."

McNab sat suddenly down. The star witness let her gaze fall to the floor again and continued slowly and painfully to draw away the veils of reticence that have shrouded the affairs from which, on Labor day Virginia Rappe was carried in delirium.

Her recital had left Arbuckle sitting at an open window of the twelfh floor suite at the St. Francis Hotel with a glass of Scotch whisky and mineral water in his hand and grumbling bitterly about the noise that came from the room where Virginia lay moaning. McNab's query was intended to bring proof that his client was sober at that time. What followed suggested instead how bleak and unpromising existence may appear eevn to the funniest man in the world.

"Mr. Arbuckle," said Zey Prevost "was very sore. He said a lot of

TIDE HURLS BOULDERS ON DOCKS

NEAT BAY, Wash., Nov. 22.—Unusual swells have flooded the water front here and recently a single towering breaker detached itself from the sea and threshed over wharfs, tearing off heavy planking and penetrating 100 to 200 feet further shoreward than any tide on record.

So powerful was the wave it tossed big boulders onto docks and into lawns. The swells were noticeable in many places on Puget Sound and are believed to have been caused by seismic disturbances off the Alaskan coast. Often terrific storms in mid-Pacific cause great swells, but never so large as this fall.

ERECTION OF $3,000,000 BANK BUILDING POSTPONED BECAUSE OF HIGH COSTS

Letting Contract For Federal Reserve Structure Deferred on Advice From Washington—$500,000 Lutheran Project Abandoned.

David C. Biggs, Governor of the St. Louis Federal Reserve Bank, announced today that he had been advised by the Federal Reserve Board at Washington, in view of prevailing high cost of labor and material in St. Louis, to defer letting the contract for the proposed new $3,000,000 Federal Reserve Bank building at Broadway and Locust street, for one year, or longer if necessary.

Biggs said that, although the bank is crowded in its present quarters in the Federal Reserve Building, at Broadway and Pine street, where it occupies six floors, the lease has until 1924 to run, with privilege of renewal for two years, and the institution would get along with the space it has rather than pay an exorbitant price for a new home.

"I was asked by the Federal Reserve Board on a recent trip to Washington if we could get along for a while in our present quarters," said Biggs, "it being pointed out to me there that building costs were excessively high in St. Louis, particularly labor, which I was informed was higher than any city in the country. I informed the board that we were working under crowded conditions with our 800 employes, but rather than go into the market for a new building at prevailing prices, could wait a year or longer before letting our contract.

It was learned today that the Board of Directors of the Lutheran Hospital a few months ago definitely abandoned a project for a new hospital to cost $500,000 because of high costs of labor and material, and instead of putting up a new building, expended $125,000 in remodeling the old structure at Potomac street and Ohio avenue.

Theodore Schroeder, 3806 Flora boulevard, president of the board, said it was intended at first to erect two new hospitals, one in South St. Louis and the other on the North Side, but this project also was given up because of high costs.

Committee to Meet Friday.

Director of Public Welfare Cunliff, who represents the public in the wage conferences of the Master Builders' Association, and the Building Trades Council, will attempt Friday, at the next meeting of the joint committee of union men and builders, to exact a promise from the union men to recommend wage reduction to the various building crafts so that millions of dollars in projects now being held up by excessive costs may be started, thus insuring employment to thousands of men throughout the winter and possibly all of next year.

Freedom, The Goal

Liberty, the highest political concept, gives to a people the best opportunities for growth and achievement. So in the spiritual order, a liberal faith, freed from the hampering and outworn accumulations of past days, gives to the soul full freedom to realize its highest aspirations toward the divine.

POWER FOR CARS STILL INADEQUATE IN RUSH HOURS

Service on U. R. Lines Said to Be 90 Per Cent of Normal, Following Accident Yesterday.

BETTER SERVICE EXPECTED TONIGHT

Burned Out Cables and Switch in Midland Station Being Repaired by Large Force of Workmen.

Street car traffic on the principal east and west lines in the morning rush hours today still showed the effects of the accident at the Midland power station of United Railways, Page and Hodiamont avenues, yesterday, when the blowing out of a high-voltage switch crippled traffic on seven important lines in the city and county.

A Coroner's verdict of accident was returned today in the case of Patrick Delehanty, 55 years old, of 6146 Suburban avenue, who was employed in the Midland plant and who died after being shocked and burned.

P. J. Murphy, 6134 Page boulevard, testified that he had observed Delahanty standing in a doorway at the plant as he passed, and that shortly afterward there was a noise resembling that of an explosion. He said he entered the plant and found Delahanty lying on the floor of an iron balcony at a point near a switch. His clothes were afire, he said.

The underground cables carrying power from the Midland plant were burned out, but an overhead cable remained in commission. To handle the peak load last night and this morning, this cable and one of two cables of the De Baliviere power station were used.

Power Weak West of Taylor.

The power supply thus gained was supplemented by power from the central United Railways station near Park and Vandeventer avenues and the northern station at Broadway and Salisbury street.

At the offices of the company it was said that the service last night and this morning, in the rush hours, was 90 per cent of normal, but that the power was weak west of Taylor avenue, causing the cars to move more slowly than usual. It was said that a large force of workmen was repairing and replacing burnt-out cables at the Midland station and that it was expected that the service would be up to normal in the rush hours from 5 to 7 o'clock tonight.

Many Delays Last Night.

The effects of the accident were keenly felt by street-car passengers yesterday afternoon and last night. Speed was fairly well maintained east of Taylor avenue outside of the Midland station power district, but there was a noticeable slowing down west of Taylor avenue on the Olive, Page, Hodiamont and Wellston lines, and there were many delays and blockades. The use of power from the central and northern stations also slowed down the cars in those districts.

After the accident at the Midland station it was said it had been preceded by trouble at the Union Electric transforming station on Page boulevard beyond the city limits. At the Union Electric office today it was said this trouble had been located and eliminated and the service was again normal.

Civil Suits Against Gov. Small.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—Edward J. Brundage, Attorney-General for Illinois, left for Springfield last night with the announcement that within 48 hours civil suits would be filed in Springfield against Gov. Len Small and other former State Treasurers. Brundage said they would be filed under the State interest law and that bondsmen for State Treasurers during past years might be affected.

The California Ends Gunnery Tests.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Nov. 22.—The new superdreadnought California returned to Los Angeles Harbor today with representatives of the Government Bureau of Standards, Washington, after gruelling gunnery tests to determine the craft's fitness. Drydocking, power runs and machinery tests are yet to be made before the California is finally accepted.

For Thanksgiving

The Table

THE spicy fragrance of baking pies fills the air, and the long white table groans under its burden of turkey and cranberry sauce, cut glass and polished silver. The dinner's the thing on Thanksgiving day.

Linen

Snowy Linen for the table is the first thing one must think about in planning the large dinner. Very probably the cloth is ready, but possibly the napkins need replacing for the family gathering.

14-inch Venetian cut napkins, some hemstitched, and others with daintily scalloped edge. They have beautiful Venetian cut motifs in the corner. A dozen $16.50

GOV. REILY HAS A TOUGH JOB BUT HE MEANS TO STICK

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—Being Governor of Porto Rico may be somewhat of an honor, but it's a mighty tough job unless the executive wants to trail along with the native bosses of the island, appoint their friends and relatives and political followers to office and accept their dictation.

These things have been learned by Gov. E. Montgomery Reily, who arrived Sunday on a blazing steamship from Porto Rico, the fire having been set, in the opinion of his friends, by political enemies with the intention of "getting" him.

The ship, the Tanamo of the Atlantic Fruit Line, had to be sunk yesterday afternoon at Pier 7, North River, to extinguish the flames, which had been burning ever since she was a day or two away from the island.

But Gov. Reily, who is from Kansas City, an "original Harding man" in that State, and a warm friend of the President, is not going to be deterred by threats or attempts upon his life. He is going to stick the full term of his office, running things the way he wants to run them, say his friends, in spite of opposition, especially of those who staged a demonstration against him in this city Sunday night after he had completed his perilous trip.

Going to Washington.

The Governor will go to Washington today to see President Harding and lay the whole Porto Rican situation before him. Then he will go to Kansas City on personal business and will return to the island in a month or six weeks. His trip here is entirely voluntary. He has not been summoned to Washington nor has he the slightest idea of quitting his job.

In advance of his talk with Mr. Harding, Gov. Reily did not feel at liberty to discuss Porto Rican affairs when an interviewer saw him at the Hotel Vanderbilt. But his Commissioner of Immigration, Robert H. Todd, a native of the island, freely discussed the situation here.

As Todd explained matters the former big boss of Porto Rico is one Antonio R. Barcelo, President of the Senate, head of the Unionist party, editor of the newspaper Democracia and leader of the element that wants complete independence from the United States.

Previous Governors, Todd said, have been influenced largely by Barcelo and have appointed to office men he named. But one of the first things Gov. Reily said to Barcelo was: "I will not appoint to office any man who is in favor of independence for Porto Rico nor will I appoint a single one of your nominees."

Barcelo Opposes Reily.

Senor Barcelo went to Havana and gave out some interviews adverse to Gov. Reily, including charges that Reily proposed to banish the Spanish language from Porto Rico.

But the Governor's inaugural speech disproved any such intention. Thus: "As Porto Rico is as much a part of the United States as Ohio or Kentucky, I hope to see the language of Washington, Lincoln and Harding taught equally with Spanish in our public schools, and all other languages shall be secondary."

In the same inaugural address Gov. Reily explained to the people of Porto Rico why he held his attitude against independence—a reason which, his spokesman said, had not been kept from them:

"The last two great national conventions held in the United States, Democratic and Republican, declared unanimously against independence for Porto Rico. Neither, my friends, is there any place in these lands for any flag save the flag of our beloved and common country, the Stars and Stripes."

Flying a "One-Star Flag."

The independistas in Porto Rico, Todd explained, had been flying "a one-star flag," like that of Cuba, only the field was blue and the stripes white and red. Most of these were hauled down after the Governor's address and when it became known that he proposed to "make the Porto Rican star the forty-ninth star on the American flag when you achieve statehood in the Union."

Commissioner Todd said Barcelo and his followers strongly opposed Reily on account of these incidents and others. He showed the interviewer a copy of Barcelo's paper, which stated at the end of an editorial, apparently, he thought, referring to the Governor:

"Thou art sowing the seeds of anarchy and must necessarily meet death."

He displayed also a report of an address by Cali Y Cuchi, Speaker of the lower house, which declared that Governor after Governor from the United States, each sent down as a "strong man," had been brought under native orders, and now this present "strong man" Reily would meet similar treatment. Concerning the "subjugation" of former Gov. Yeager, a Wilson appointee, Cuchi said:

"This means our victory over 100,000,000 North Americans, over huge warships, over thousands of soldiers, over a great and powerful nation. This was the victory of the Unionist party."

All the trouble, according to Commissioner Todd, may be blamed upon the Governor's (Reily's) refusal to bow to Barcelo and his associates.

The cause of the fire aboard the steamship Tanamo continues a mystery, despite efforts of Federal agents and steamship officials to trace it to a plot of Porto Rican secessionists against the Governor's life. Three arrests which Todd said he had been informed were imminent have failed to materialize, and Capt. Herbert Hudson of the Tanamo says an examination of members of the crew failed to aid in solving the mystery.

Threatening letters received by Gov. Reily before he sailed, Capt. Hudson said, made it appear as "of possible incendiary origin."

"I would not want to go as far as to say it was incendiary," he said, "for the reason that I have no evidence to support that belief. There are many ways in which fire aboard a ship among the cargo can be caused.

"I did say in talking to Mr. Todd that one of the many possible ways it could have happened was a candle to have been placed in a scene-soaked box hidden among cargo before the ship sailed."

Get Nerve Force from Nuxated Iron

It will strengthen your nerves and increase your vigor and endurance, often in two weeks' time. It contains the principal chemical constituent of active living nerve force in a form which most nearly resembles that in the brain and nerve cells of man. It also contains organic iron like the iron in your blood, and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples. Organic iron enriches the blood, and plenty of rich red blood means more nerve force, so that Nuxated Iron not only feeds what might be termed artificial nerve force to the nerve cells, but it stimulates the blood to manufacture a greatly increased supply of new nerve force. Get a bottle of Nuxated Iron today, and if within two weeks' time you do not feel that it has increased your nerve force and made you feel better and stronger in every way, your money will be refunded. Sold by all druggists.

Says His Prescription Has Powerful Influence Over Rheumatism

Mr. James H. Allen suffered for years with rheumatism. Many times this terrible disease left him helpless and unable to work.

He finally decided, after years of ceaseless study, that no one can be free from rheumatism until the accumulated impurities, commonly called uric acid deposits, were dissolved in the joints and muscles and expelled from the body.

With this idea in mind he consulted physicians, made experiments and finally compounded a prescription that quickly and completely banished every sign and symptom of rheumatism from his system.

He freely gave his discovery to those who took it, with what might be called marvelous success. After years of study he decided to let sufferers everywhere know about his discovery through the newspapers. Wolff-Wilson Drug Co.—Judge & Dolph Drug Co.—Johnson Bros. FORMER POSTMISTRESS GOES TO TRIAL ON MURDER CHARGE

Aged and Feeble Parents and Sister in Court With Miss Lena Clarke.

By the Associated Press.

ORLANDO, Fla., Nov. 22.—The trial of Lena M. T. Clarke, former postmistress at West Palm Beach, charged with the murder in August of Fred A. Miltimore, a restaurant keeper of this city, and a former associate of Miss Clarke in the West Palm Beach Postoffice, opened here today.

Facing the trial bar with Miss Clarke is Baxter Patterson, the West Palm Beach chauffeur, who drove the former to Orlando on Aug. 13 when the tragedy occurred. Notwithstanding a heavy rain crowds began early to assemble at the courthouse. It is expected that the selection of a jury will take two days.

Miss Clarke, arrayed in the striking plain, loose-fitting dress in which she had been photographed, and which she wore on the automobile trip from West Palm Beach to Orlando the day Miltimore was killed, came into court and took her place between her attorneys on the one hand, and her parents, the Rev. and Mrs. A. T. Clarke, and her sister, Miss Maud Clarke, on the other.

Her father, a former minister, is 85, and her mother is 79. The aged and feeble couple were palpably dismayed at the atention their daughter attracted.

RADICALS OF SOU'H AMERICA QUICK TO RESPOND TO CRY, 'SAVE SACCO AND VANZETTI'

Propadandists' Message From Boston Spread Swiftly Through Itay, France, Spain and Engand.

This is the third of a series of articles on the spread of the radical propaganda in the Sacco-Vanzetti case of Boston. This article shows the growth of this new cause celebre, hatched in a Boston office and transplanted into Italy, South America, Switzerland, Belgium, Portugal—leaving its imprint in violence and in bloodshed.

By SAMUEL SPEWACK,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

Copyright, 1921, by the Press Publishing Co. (The New York World.)

BOSTON, Nov. 22.—"Save Sacco and Vanzetti!" the typewriters clattered in the little office in Boston.

Italy answered with street demonstrations, demands for the boycott of American goods, appeals in the Chamber of Deputies for governmental intervention in the case.

The Italian Government, replying to the incessant clamor, promised to present a plea for mercy to the United States if the two men were finally condemned to death. Its representatives here, it is learned, have sent a detailed report of the court proceedings to Rome.

Portugal answered. Holland answered. London answered. Mexico answered. Switzerland answered. Uruguay answered. Belgium—Russia—Porto Rico—Cuba—Algiers. The three men in Boston, those who aided them, had written: "Sacco and Vanzetti were convicted because they were radicals." The radicals of the world responded.

And while decision upon an appeal for a new trial is still pending, the world even now echoes and re-echoes to the cry from Boston:

"Save Sacco and Vanzetti!"

Response to the Cry.

The Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee—Lyons, Lopez, Feliciani and those who responded to the cry—knew their appeals would be heard.

"The words which the foreman of the jury pronounced in trembling voice—'Guilty! Guilty of murder in the first degree!' will ring through the whole proletarian world," says the Spanish leaflet published by the Boston office.

These men believed in the innocence of the two Italian laborers. They were convinced that a court in Massachusetts, a provincial jury, could not, because of innate prejudices, mete out justice to foreigners and radicals. They knew of the Mooney case, where public attention was attracted here by a demonstration in Russia. So the typewriters clattered: "Save Sacco and Vanzetti!"

They did not foresee the bloodshed in Paris, the bombing attempt in Lisbon; the wave of world violence.

In Italy the situation was and is critical. The Minister of Foreign Affairs was compelled to reply, so he promised that the Italian Government would intercede with a plea of mercy if the two men were finally condemned to death.

Detailed accounts of the testimony were carried in all radical newspapers in Rome. The Communist and anarchist organizations spread the propaganda through the streets.

At a meeting in Luino of syndicalists an "order of the day" was voted. It was this:

"If the Italian Government does not intervene in time to save Sacco and Vanzetti from the electric chair, the Italian proletariat shall use all the means in its power to boycott merchandise from North America."

In Legnano, Socialist students met "to consider what they could do to launch effective propaganda among the workers on behalf of comrades Sacco and Vanzetti, convicted of a crime across the ocean for their devotion to an idea."

Italian Radicals Complain.

Italian radicals complained of the cautious attitude of their Government. Said the Umanita Novato:

"It remains simply that the Italian Government wants to divert the attention of the people and smother the national conflagration by making it think there is no immediate danger (of the electrocution of Sacco and Vanzetti). We are here to repeat that Sacco and Vanzetti were convicted principally because they were Italians—just as negroes are condemned over there, or revolutionaries condemned by the Czar principally because they were workmen."

Again: "The United States Government is perfectly aware that it can with impunity lynch Italians like negroes without the majority of the American public arousing itself."

Various newspapers referred to the Palmer administration; the arrests and deportation of radicals. They did not, they said, expect justice from the "republic of the golden calf," a government "sold to the capitalist interests."

Italy knew each detail of the Sacco and Vanzetti case; the name of the Judge, the two principal witnesses against the men.

America knew practically nothing of the case.

The apparent mystery is quickly dispelled by a visit to the office in Boston. Agitation, an Italian weekly published by the committee, was sent to every radical newspaper in Italy, together with detailed English accounts of the testimony at the trial.

Examine the issue of this paper on October 25. Allow, of course, for the natural violent expression of the Latin. Read:

"We should rise determinedly in defense of threatened liberty. We must give to American bourgeois a lesson which will make it realize once for all that it cannot with impunity lay hands upon foreign workingmen agitators. We must put an end to le truce. Down with hypocrisy. Ils the masses which must arouse hemselves; the proletarian, immigrat masses."

This same issue contained the statemt previously quoted, that the committee was in "receipt of last-minte telegrams in all the cities of Ita and other parts of Europe that viol uprisings are on foot in favor of the prisoners."

Cruds Before Embassy.

Accoun of the Italian uprising followed. Crowds in front of the American embassy in Rome "became menacing and it was then "that the police after several violent collisions, succeded in dispersing the mob."

But Ital was only part of the world that made protest. Even Switzerland id heard. Meetings in Berne, Geneva Lucerne were reported in Il Rieviigio, printed in Geneva in Italian and French. This radical newspaper reported street demonstrations in soviet Russia. Meetings in Switzerland resulted in a petition to the American legation from the Workingmen's Union.

The movement sprouted in all directions. England heard of it directly from Lyons, the former Co-

FORMER POSTMISTRESS GOES TO TRIAL ON MURDER CHARGE

Aged and Feeble Parents and Sister in Court With Miss Lena Clarke.

By the Associated Press.

ORLANDO, Fla., Nov. 22.—The trial of Lena M. T. Clarke, former postmistress at West Palm Beach, charged with the murder in August of Fred A. Miltimore, a restaurant keeper of this city, and a former associate of Miss Clarke in the West Palm Beach Postoffice, opened here today.

Pacing the trial bar with Miss Clarke is Baxter Patterson, the West Palm Beach chauffeur, who drove the former to Orlando on Aug. 12 when the tragedy occurred. Notwithstanding a heavy rain crowds began early to assemble at the courthouse. It is expected that the selection of a jury will take two days.

Miss Clarke, arrayed in the striking plain, loose-fitting dress in which she had been photographed, and which she wore on the automobile trip from West Palm Beach to Orlando the day Miltimore was killed, came into court and took her place between her attorneys on the one hand, and her parents, the Rev. and Mrs. A. T. Clarke, and her sister, Miss Maud Clarke, on the other.

Her father, a former minister, is 85, and her mother is 79. The aged and feeble couple were palpably dismayed at the atention their daughter attracted.

RADICALS OF SOUTH AMERICA QUICK TO RESPOND TO CRY, 'SAVE SACCO AND VANZETTI'

Propadandists' Message From Boston Spread Swiftly Through Italy, France, Spain and Engand.

This is the third of a series of articles on the spread of the radical propaganda in the Sacco-Vanzetti case of Boston. This article shows the growth of this new cause celebre, hatched in a Boston office and transplanted into Italy, South America, Switzerland, Belgium, Portugal—leaving its imprint in violence and in bloodshed.

By SAMUEL SPEWACK,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

Copyright, 1921, by the Press Publishing Co. (The New York World.)

BOSTON, Nov. 22.—"Save Sacco and Vanzetti!" the typewriters clattered in the little office in Boston.

Italy answered with street demonstrations, demands for the boycott of American goods, appeals in the Chamber of Deputies for governmental intervention in the case.

The Italian Government, replying to the incessant clamor, promised to present a plea for mercy to the United States if the two men were finally condemned to death. Its representatives here, it is learned, have sent a detailed report of the court proceedings to Rome.

Portugal answered. Holland answered. London answered. Mexico answered. Switzerland answered. Uruguay answered. Belgium—Russia—Porto Rico—Cuba—Algiers. The three men in Boston, those who aided them, had written: "Sacco and Vanzetti were convicted because they were radicals." The radicals of the world responded.

And while decision upon an appeal for a new trial is still pending, the world even now echoes and re-echoes to the cry from Boston: "Save Sacco and Vanzetti!"

Response to the Cry.

The Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee—Lyons, Lopez, Feliciani and those who responded to the cry—knew their appeals would be heard.

"The words which the foreman of the jury pronounced in trembling voice—Guilty! Guilty of murder in the first degree!" will ring through the whole proletarian world," says the Spanish leaflet published by the Boston office.

These men believed in the innocence of the two Italian laborers. They were convinced that a court in Massachusetts, a provincial jury, could not, because of innate prejudices, mete out justice to foreigners and radicals. They knew of the Mooney case, where public attention was attracted here by a demonstration in Russia. So the typewriters clattered: "Save Sacco and Vanzetti!"

They did not foresee the bloodshed in Paris, the bombing attempt in Lisbon; the wave of world violence.

In Italy the situation was and is critical. The Minister of Foreign Affairs was compelled to reply, so he promised that the Italian Government would intercede with a plea of mercy if the two men were finally condemned to death.

Detailed accounts of the testimony were carried in all radical newspapers in Rome. The Communist and anarchist organizations spread the propaganda through the streets.

At a meeting in Luino of syndicalists an "order of the day" was voted. It was this:

"If the Italian Government does not intervene in time to save Sacco and Vanzetti from the electric chair, the Italian proletariat shall use all the means in its power to boycott merchandise from North America."

In Legnano, Socialist students met "to consider what they could do to launch effective propaganda among the workers on behalf of comrades Sacco and Vanzetti, convicted of a crime across the ocean for their devotion to an idea."

Italian Radicals Complain.

Italian radicals complained of the cautious attitude of their Government. Said the Umanita Novato:

"It remains simply that the Italian Government wants to divert the attention of the people and smother the national conflagration by making it think there is no immediate danger (of the electrocution of Sacco and Vanzetti). We are here to repeat that Sacco and Vanzetti were convicted principally because they were Italians—just as negroes are condemned over there, or revolutionaries condemned by the Czar principally because they were workmen."

Again: "The United States Government is perfectly aware that it can with impunity lynch Italians like negroes without the majority of the American public arousing itself."

Various newspapers referred to the Palmer administration: the arrests and deportation of radicals. They did not, they said, expect justice from the "republic of the golden calf," a government "sold to the capitalist interests."

Italy knew each detail of the Sacco and Vanzetti case: the name of the Judge, the two principal witnesses against the men.

America knew practically nothing of the case.

The apparent mystery is quickly dispelled by a visit to the office in Boston. Agitation, an Italian weekly published by the committee, was sent to every radical newspaper in Italy, together with detailed English accounts of the testimony at the trial.

Examine the issue of this paper on October 25. Allow, of course, for the natural violent expression of the Latin. Read:

"We should rise determinedly in defense of threatened liberty. We must give to American bourgeois a lesson which will make it realize once for all that it cannot with impunity lay hands upon foreign workingmen-agitators. We must put an end to to truce. Down with hypocrisy. It is the masses which must arouse themselves; the proletarian, immigrat masses."

This same issue contained the statement previously quoted, that the committee was in "receipt of last-minte telegrams in all the cities of Italy and other parts of Europe that violnt uprisings are on foot in favor of the prisoners."

Cruds Before Embassy.

Accounts of the Italian uprising followed. Crowds in front of the American embassy in Rome "became menacing, and it was then "that the police after several violent collisions, succeeded in dispersing the mob."

But Italy was only part of the world that made protest. Even Switzerland had heard. Meetings in Berne, Geneva, Lucerne were reported in Il Rieviligio, printed in Geneva in Italian and French. This radical newspaper reported street demonstrations, in soviet Russia. Meetings in Switzerland resulted in a petition to the American legation from the Workingmen's Union.

MAN HANGS HIMSELF IN ATTIC OF HIS HOME

Body of Superintendent of Glass Company Found by Wife Upon Return Home at 7:30 P. M.

Leon Boulicault, 62 years old, 7028 Stanley avenue, superintendent of the Oriel Glass Co., Twenty-second and Papin streets, hanged himself yesterday afternoon in the attic of his home.

His wife was out during the afternoon. When she returned at 7:30 p. m. she called him, but he did not answer. She looked into the attic and saw him hanging there. He had stood on a trunk and tied a rope around a rafter and noosed it around his neck and stepped off. He had been suffering from nervous trouble.

Besides his wife, two daughters, Miss Victourine Boulicault, a public school teacher, and Miss Lucille Boulicault, a student, survive.

lumbia student. A long article under his name was printed in the radical journal Freedom. Brussels heard of it through the communist organization across the continent. The Third Internationale received its news from myriad sources.

It reached Algiers, where Robert Olivier discussed it in his magazine, the Social Struggle. And from Africa one may trace the movement to Mexico, to South America, to Porto Rico.

Direct communication with the South American radicals was maintained by the Boston office. A proclamation in Montevideo, Uruguay, contains a letter from Jose Morinero of Boston, friend of Lopez, the Spanish carpenter.

"From the inclosed literature you can get an idea of the situation in our town," writes Marinero via Lopez, who handles the Spanish-South American publicity. "The bourgeoisie, realizing its mistake in having deported hundreds, assassinating dozens, while in the hands of the police, are now hatching another plot, which is to accuse Comrades Sacco and Vanzetti, to discredit them and to make it impossible for them to spread any further propaganda.

"We appeal to you to co-operate in the most effective manner possible. We do not forget that the comrades sentenced to death in San Francisco owe their lives to the canny communists in Moscow, and it may well be that action on your part will free from the infamy of death the two worthy comrades in Boston."

There follows a ghastly account of electrocution, taken almost verbatim from the Spanish leaflet published in Boston.

Strikes in South America.

Montevideo answered with general strikes and a demand for the boycott of American products. The metal workers, the chauffeurs' unions issued proclamations. The city was paralyzed for several days.

Mexico answered. The oWrker in Mexico spread a two-column story captioned "A Crime Against North American Imperialism."

The General Confederation of Workingmen at their first congress protested against the arrest of the two men, who had merely shown their "dissatisfaction with the barbarous regime of exploitation and hatred which goes on in the well-known land of liberty in the United States."

Brazil answered, Havana answered. Major-General Crowder was threatened, and several radicals were arrested. El Progresso of Havana comments that these radicals were mild tempered, contemplated no violence, that the police over-reached themselves. Porto Ricans answered with comparatiyely mild demonstrations.

Lisbon answered with an attempt to bomb the home of the American Consul-General. Even in London there was a mild demonstration, organized by Sylvia Pankhurst. Miss Pankhurst published in her magazine, the Dreadnought, an account of the case and an invitation for sympathizers to march to the American embassy. There was, however, little response.

"Save Sacco and Vanzetti" traveled into Stockholm, and the syndicalists there protested to the American representatives.

All over the world the cry had reached and its echoes came back to the office in Boston; came back to the sounding boards of each land that had intensified the appeal. France reported demonstrations in Italy. Italy reported demonstrations in France.

And the three men still sit at the typewriters, in the dingy office in Boston, writing, mailing, talking—wondering at the insignificance of oceans.

Another article to be printed in the Post-Dispatch will show the whirlwind which the ramified propaganda has reaped. Still another will analyze in detail the Sacco-Vanzetti trial.

"ERMINIE" A FEAST OF MIMICRY AND MELODY

Francis Wilson and DeWolf Hopper Revel in Comedy of Operetta.

By CARLOS F. HURD.

ARE there any more like "Erminie" in the storehouse of bygone stage treasures? If so, let us get them out and give a needed rest to the architects of jazz entertainment, and to ourselves.

The revival of "Erminie," operetta of the '80s, at the American Theater, charmed the many in last night's audience to whom it was new, almost equally with the few to whom it was an old friend.

Francis Wilson and De Wolf Hopper, in comedy roles of rollicking rascality, were not permitted to be the whole show. Lillian Glaser, Rosamond Whiteside and the chorus sang as if the performance depended on them alone, and had no comedy to fall back upon.

Two of Original Cast.

"His original character" were the words appearing in parentheses in the program line designating Francis Wilson as Cadeaux. The same words appeared with the name of a veteran player, Jennie Weathersby, in the mature role of the Princess, in the second act.

As Cadeaux, who had been in jail three times for four months, four times for three months, twice for a year and once for two years, and whose plea in a new scrape was "first offense and an alibi," Wilson was expertly funny. His incorrigible attachment to thieves' slang, in the society where his more polished comrade sought to pass him off as a Baron, and his primitive table manners, were ruling features of a very skillful and laughable characterization. The nimbleness of his legs suggests that, though not a stranger to gray hairs, he has never made the acquaintance of rheumatism. His warbled speculation as to the utterances of the dicky-birds was followed by a few songs which were related to "Erminie" only as to the time of their origin, the first of these being "A Little Peach in an Orchard Grew."

Hopper Indispensable.

Hopper, as Raveness, master mind of the predatory partnership, was less compellingly funny than Wilson, and at the same time seemed more indispensable in this role. There could be other acceptable Cadeauxs—the name of Frank Moulan suggests itself here—but just who else could deliver the lines of Raveness with the Hopper vocal and facial heroics?

In an appearance before the curtain, Hopper and Wilson exchange repartee as to their respective ages, Wilson informing Hopper that "My father used to take me to see you act when I was a child in pantalettes."

Of the two chief feminine parts, the score has furnished the choicer vocal material to Miss Glaser as Erminie. Her singing of the lullaby ballad was charming in its purity of tone and tenderness of expression. Miss Whiteside, as the maid Javotte, displayed a daintiness of voice and a nicety of acting that should make her a star in some not distant season. Her "Ohe, Mamma," a song not in the original published score of "Erminie," but after the fashion of the same period, was given with the utmost mimetic grace.

Miss Lessing's Role.

One of the conceits of old-time operetta was to present women in men's parts, preferably as officers or orderlies. In a day when tights had not their present acceptance, this gave physical shapeliness a chance to escape from the concealment of crinoline. In "Erminie," the role of Capt. Delauney, who makes love to all the girls, is set for a feminine voice, and Madge Lessing fills the role plumply. Alexander Clark, as a powdered chevalier, carries on an amusing comedy scene with Hopper. Sudwarth Frasier has the chief tenor role, and his solo and duet with Miss Glaser were well rendered. Primrose Caryll performs a slight role prettily.

The chorus, which apparently was selected for its singing quality, finds its best opportunity in the final "Good Night" song, in which the singers, holding candles, line a double stairway. The chorus men, in their appearance as soldiers under the command of Miss Lessing, appear of startling size, and it seems some of them must have been picked especially to match Hopper in stature.

One Prohibition Jest.

The comedy clung, with rare fidelity, to the period of its origin. About the only dips into present-day material were a momentary allusion to the departure of alcohol, and a play upon the initials "V. de B.," which the rogues find upon a stolen valise.

Such revisions as have been made in the work of Harry Paulton, author of the book of "Erminie," and Edward Jakobowski, composer of the score, are credited to Marc Connelly. Comparison between the list of lyrics in the program, and those in the original published score, show about a 60 per cent adherence to that score. But the songs not in the original score are in the style of the same period, rather than of the more dissonant present. The absence of unrelated vaudevilles, and the sufficiency of the play's own comedy for its own purposes, marked it as being of the pre-revue period. The audience was large, and its response was enthusiastic.

Wireless Concert Postponed.

The wireless concert, announced for this evening by the orchestra of St. Louis University, has been postponed on account of an accident to the radiating apparatus at the university's sending station. Another date for the concert will be announced later.

RUNDLE TO BE MADE ASSISTANT TO O'BRIEN

Other Changes in Police Department Said to Have Been Agreed Upon.

Several important changes in the organization of the Police Department will be made in the near future, including the promotion of Assistant Chief of Detectives William E. Rundle to be Assistant Chief of Police, it was learned by the Post-Dispatch today.

The changes were scheduled for this afternoon's meeting of the Police Board, but may be delayed until next Tuesday's meeting because of the absence from the city of Victor J. Miller, president of the board.

Rundle's promotion will carry an increase in salary from $2400 to $3800 a year.

Rundle is a protege of Commissioner William Young, whom he served as assistant secretary when Young was Chief of Police. Christy G. Gillaspy was retired as Assistant Chief of Police last May, after 50 years' service in the department. Lieut. Wade H. Matthews has been acting as Assistant Chief. Among the contemplated changes is the promotion of Matthews to the rank of Captain, as a reward for his energetic work in clearing downtown streets and cafes of undesirable women. Recently he has been working on liquor violation cases.

Captains Affected by Changes.

Two and possibly three Captains will be affected by the changes and are slated for retirement or reduction. Capt. Patrick Gaffney of the Magnolia Avenue District and William Tierney of the Carondelet District are mentioned in this connection.

REVOCATION OF SWITCH TRACK PERMIT UNDER ADVISEMENT

85 Pupils and 50 Residents Object to Line Across Street Near Stix School.

The Board of Public Service today took under advisement the application of the Board of Education and the Forest Park Residents' Association for the revocation of a permit issued for the Wabash Railroad to install a switch track crossing Duncan avenue, between Newstead and Taylor avenues, to serve the Tulley Implement Co.

Eighty-five children from the William Stix School, which is in the vicinity of the track, and 50 members of the Residents' Association appeared before the board, together with the President and attorney of the Board of Education. They opposed the track, on the ground that it was a menace to the safety of children going to and from school, and on the ground that it marred the residential desirability of the neighborhood.

The company contends the district is industrial under the zoning ordinance, and that any industry which sought the district should be permitted to enjoy the benefits of all industry, including switch tracks, necessary in the case of the Tulley company because it deals in heavy machinery.

Robert Burkham, attorney for the Board of Education, declared that two years ago, when the board was contemplating the erection of the Stix school, the Board of Public Service revoked a permit for a switch track in proximinity to the school because it was declared that the school would not be erected if the switch track was put in. Burkham said the withdrawal of the permit at that time was an inferential pledge to the Board of Education that tracks would not be put in near the school.

CONTRACTS FOR 106 MILES OF HIGHWAY IN STATE IN MONTH

Work Let During November Will Cost $1,367,490; Mostly Graded Earth Construction.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, Nov. 22.—Highway work is progressing in Missouri, although the State Highway Commission became extinct on Nov. 2, when the new road law went into effect. This fact is shown by a report just issued by the State Highway Department, indicating that, by the close of the month, contracts for 106 miles of highway, costing $1,367,490, will have been let during November. This work includes both Federal and State aid road projects, contracts for which have been let under the direction of the division engineers of the Highway Department.

The greatest part of the highway that will be contracted for during the present month is of graded earth construction, more than 80 miles of the total being of this type. Thirteen miles of the construction will be of one course cement concrete type, and 12 miles of gravel pavement type.

NEGRO BELLBOY IS FLOGGED

Masked Men Act After Confession Involving White Women.

By the Associated Press.

MUSKOGEE Ok., Nov. 22.—A. G. Holstean, negro bellboy at a leading hotel here, was taken from the hotel last night by 20 masked men and severely flogged. He was left in the field where they had taken him, a short distance from town, while the men returned to the city and dispersed.

The negro confessed relations with white women at the hotel where he is employed, according to a newspaper reporter, who accompanied the band.

Take ARCOLA as a Gift—from your Heating Engineer

We mean it—a gift.

Your Heating Engineer will tell you that three average winters will pay back its cost to you in the fuel it saves.

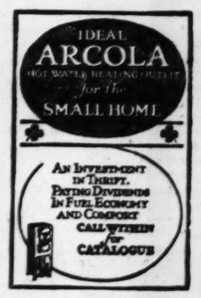

And think of the satisfaction of having every room warmed by its own American Radiator—the same kind of radiators that warm the White House itself.

Think of the joy of having all the hot water you want for washing or bathing, for ARCOLA can heat the kitchen tank, too, without subtracting from the warmth of the house.

Surely all this comfort is worth the little trouble of telephoning your Heating Engineer. He will gladly call and make an estimate. You will be surprised to learn how little ARCOLA costs and how quickly it can be installed.

Don't go through another winter bathing and dressing and eating in chilly rooms. Take a little comfort out of life—especially comfort that pays its own way. Take ARCOLA from your Heating Engineer—take it as his gift.

The red and yellow card at the right is the sign of a Heating or Sanitary Engineer (you used to call him Steamfitter or Plumber) who can show you ARCOLA. Look for it in his window.

It will pay you to consult him twice a year as you do your Doctor or Dentist. His report on your heating and plumbing costs little. It may save much.

Why the Printer Needs His Saturday Afternoon

FOR years the eight-hour day with Saturday afternoon off has been established as the ideal plan for brain workers. Printers require this working plan even more than office workers. A printer must be in constant mental condition to produce not only absolute accuracy, but must possess a highly artistic sense. Long working hours dull his ability and lower the quality of your printing.

Any office worker knows that when he works "overtime" the quality of his work as well as his health generally suffers. This is particularly true if his work is exacting or requires a high degree of creative ability.

There must be rest and recreation to rebuild after the mental and physical strain of working. And Saturday afternoon is of great value. It gives the printer time to get the exercise and fresh air necessary to combat the effects of his close confinement during the day. And remember that every advance in the printing art has had to be studied out by the printer in his spare time.

Printing not only takes great concentration and keen attention to detail, but clear, quick thinking under the pressure of heavy work. Added to this mental strain, the Union Printer has exhausting physical labor.

To meet these conditions, the Union Printer needs reasonable working hours, and that is what he is asking for now.

He wants eight hours a day with the Saturday half-holiday so that he can give you better printing than you have ever received and at more value per dollar. See that your printing orders are placed with establishments employing Union Printers on the forty-four-hour-week working basis.

This is the trade-mark of Thierry Martin, Pioneer Printer Craftsman of 1474. The Union Label represents the development of the printing craft of today.

For seventy years the International Typographical Union has built for the benefit of the printing crafts. It maintains the great Union Printers' Home and Tuberculosis Sanatorium at Colorado Springs, provides pensions and death benefits and prepares apprentices through a complete course of instruction. If you would like to learn more about this great, progressive organization, address us for the booklet "Facts," which gives you unbiased information in greater detail.

Tumulty Reveals Wilson Took No Step to End War Until Foch Said It Was Unwise to Incur Further Loss

Show How Groundless Were Reports Circulated by Republicans That He Was Imposing His Will on Judgment of Allied Military Leaders.

By Joseph P. Tumulty.
For 10 Years Private Secretary to Woodrow Wilson.

MEANWHILE events in other directions had been moving rapidly. Replying to Austria-Hungary on Oct. 18, the President pointed out that a radical change had been worked in point 10, which read: "The peoples of Austria-Hungary, whose place among the nations we wish to see safeguarded and assured, should be accorded the freest opportunity of autonomous development."

"Since that sentence was written and uttered to the Congress of the United States," he said, "the Government of the United States has recognized that a state of belligerency exists between the Czecho-Slovaks and the German and Austro-Hungarian empires, and that the Czecho-Slovak National Council is a de facto belligerent Government clothed with proper authority to direct the military and political affairs of the Czecho-Slovaks. It has also recognized in he fullest manner the justice of the nationalistic aspirations of the Jugoslavs for freedom."

On Oct. 28 the Austro-Hungarian Government submitted to the conditions of the President, and on Nov. 4 accepted armistice terms that amounted to a complete surrender. Bulgaria had already withdrawn on Sept. 29, and Turkey had capitulated on Oct. 31. On Nov. 5 the President transmitted to Germany the decision of the allied Governments. Subject to two qualifications, they declared their willingness to make peace with the Government of Germany on the terms of peace laid down in the President's address to Congress of Jan. 8, 1918, and the principle of settlement enunciated in his subsequent addresses. The qualifications were: (1) Freedom of the seas, being open to various interpretations, must be left to the Peace Conference, and in the discussion they "reserve to themselves complete freedom." (2) Further, in the conditions of peace laid down in his address to Congress on the 8th of January, 1918, the President declared that invaded territories must be restored as well as evacuated and made free. The allied Governments feel that no doubt ought to be allowed to exist as to what this provision implies. By it they understand that compensation will be made by Germany for "all damages done to the civilian population of the allies and to their property by the aggression of Germany by land, by sea, and from the air."

Armistice Terms Submitted.

The acceptance of the German Government was given on Oct. 27; the armistice terms were submitted on Nov. 8, and were signed by the Germans to become effective on Nov. 11. At the time the Germans had 2,000,000 men under arms on the Western front, and to the east there were the armies of Mackensen and Von Sanders. What happened to them was an utter spiritual collapse, a disintegration of morale both on the firing line and among the civilian population. And history will say that this was due to the words of Wilson in even larger degree than to the hammer blows of Foch.

There is a tendency in certain quarters today to attack the peace treaty on the theory that the German capitulation was in no sense a surrender, but merely a cessation of hostilities on certain fixed terms. This view, as a matter of fact, is the very basis of "The Economic Consequences of the Peace," the book in which J. M. Keynes appeals to the world in behalf of Germany. The contention entirely ignores the second stipulation of the allies' answer, the specific statement that "compensation will be made by Germany for all damage done to the civil population of the allies and to their property by the aggression of Germany by land, by sea and from the air."

This all-embracing clause, agreed to by the President, meant unconditional surrender, and the Germans were in no doubt as to the intent. Ludendorff, in his Memoirs, says:

On Oct. 23 or 24 Wilson's answer arrived. It was a strong answer to our cowardly note. This time he made it quite clear that the armistice conditions must be such as to make it impossible for Germany to resume hostilities and to give the Powers allied against her unlimited power to settle themselves the details of the peace accepted by Germany. In my view, there could no longer be doubt in my mind that we must continue the fight.

Hindenburg held to the same view, and on Oct. 24 signed an order "for the information of all troops" that made these statements:

He (Wilson) will negotiate with Germany for peace only if she concedes all the demands of America's allies as to the internal constitutional arrangements of Germany. * * * Wilson's answer is a demand for unconditional surrender. It is thus unacceptable to to us soldiers.

The closing words were a passionate appeal to "continue resistance with all our strength." The order, however, was never promulgated. Hindenburg and Ludendorff were both overruled, and the note of submission went forward to the President, a note that accepted the terms that every German fighting man knew to be unconditional surrender.

A Real Surrender.

A second opportunity to choose between war and surrender was afforded the Germans by the presentation of the armistice terms. A more definite and detailed document was never framed. It set down provision after provision that were the very essence of unconditional surrender, and at every point it made clear what the peace treaty itself would contain. It was in the power of the Germans to denounce the terms as being in violation of the President's assurances of a "just peace." They made no such denunciation. Instead, they signed and accepted the armistice terms and it remained for an English economist, writing a year later, to discover that the Germans did not surrender and that the allies were false to promises.

The President's opponents deliberately spread the story throughout the country that in bringing about the armistice he had entered into negotiations with Germany without the knowledge of the allies and had finally imposed his own terms of peace upon the unwilling allies in order to prevent their victorious armies from marching to Berlin. Republican Senators on the "hill" gave aid and comfort to these individuals who were industriously engaged in spreading these unfounded rumors.

Andre Tardieu, who has written a most interesting book on the peace conference, and who attended all of the negotiations looking to an armistice, puts an end to these myths. In his book there is carried a statement from Tardieu that from Oct. 5, the day when Germany first asked for an armistice, President Wilson remained in daily contact with the European Governments, and that the American Government was in favor of writing into the armistice harsher terms than the allies thought it wise to propose to the Germans.

WILSON HAD FOCH'S FULL ACCORD BEFORE ARMISTICE WAS GRANTED

It will be recalled that the popular cry at the time was "On to Berlin," and an urgent demand upon the part of the enemies of the President on Capitol Hill that he should stand pat for an unconditional surrender from Germany; that there should be no soft peace or compromise with Germany, and that we should send our soldiers to Berlin. At the time we discussed this attitude of mind of certain men on the "Hill," the President said: "How utterly foolish this is! Of course, some of our so-called military leaders, for propaganda purposes only, are saying that it would be more advantageous for us to decline the offer of Germany and to go to Berlin. They do not, however, give our people any estimate of the cost in blood and money to consummate this enterprise." The story was also industriously circulated that Marshal Foch was demurring to any proposition for a settlement with Germany. It was made to appear by Republican propagandists that the President was weakening and always deferring to the soft terms of peace proposed by Germany.

Foch for Speeding Possible End.

It appears now that in the negotiations for the armistice Col. House, representing the President's point of view in this vital matter, asked this fundamental question of Foch: "Will you tell us, Marshal, purely from a military point of view and without regard to any other condition, whether you would prefer the Germans to reject or sign the armistice as outlined here?" Marshal Foch replied: "The only aim of war is to obtain results. If the Germans sign an armistice now upon the general lines we have just determined, we shall have obtained the results we asked. Our aims being accomplished, no one has the right to shed another drop of blood."

It was said at the time that the President was forcing a settlement upon the military leaders of the allies. Gen. Foch disposed of this by saying, in answer to a question by Col. House and Lloyd George: "The conditions laid down by your military leaders are the very conditions which we ought to and could impose after the success of our further operations, so that if the Germans accept them now, it is useless to go on fighting."

What remains of the fiction, then, so cleverly woven by Republican enemies and believed by many throughout the country, that the terms of the armistice were secretly entered into by an American dictator and submitted by him to the European Governments over the opposition of the allied Generals?

The fact is that every term of the armistice was discussed in the open light of day, and the President only consented to communicate it to his associates on the condition that its principle be approved by the military authorities and its clauses be drawn up by them and imposed upon the enemy, preventing the resumption of hostilities and assuring the submission of the vanquished to the terms of peace.

As a humorous ending to a serious matter, I may say here that when the armistice terms were finally accepted the President said: "Well, Tumulty, the war's over, and I feel like the Confederate soldier Gen. John B. Gordon used to tell of, soliloquizing on a long, hard march, during the Civil War: 'I love my country and I am fightin' for my country, but if this war ever ends, I'll be dad-burned if I ever love another country.'"

Appeal for Democratic Congress.

The President's appeal to the country on Oct. 24, 1918, asking for the election of a Democratic Congress, brought down upon him a storm of criticism and ridicule. Many leading Democrats who had strongly urged an appeal by the President as a necessary and proper thing in the unusual war situation which had confronted him, as the criticism directed toward it grew more bitter, turned away from it and criticised what they said was the ineptitude and lack of tact of the President in issuing it. As a matter of fact, opinion in the Democratic ranks as to the wisdom and necessity of a general appeal was unanimous prior to the issuance of the statement. When the President asked the support of the country through the election of a Democratic Congress he was seeking to prevent divided leadership at a moment when his undisputed control was a necessity, because of the effect a repudiation of his administration would work upon the Central Powers. He realized that the defeat of his administration in the midst of the world war would give aid and comfort to the Central Powers and that the allied Governments would themselves interpret it as a weakening of our war power, and while the enemy would be strengthened, our associates would be distressed and disheartened.

He looked upon it, therefore, as a partisan matter, not partizan, but involving the good faith of America. At previous elections the White House had been inundated with requests from particular Senators and Congressmen, urging the President to write letters in their behalf, and this had resulted in so much embarrassment to the Chief Executive that as the critical days of the November elections of 1918 approached, the President was forced to consider a more general and, if possible, a more diplomatic method of handling this difficult situation. The gentlemen who criticised the appeal as outrageously partisan evidently forgot that for months Will H. Hays, Chairman of the Republican National Committee, had been busily engaged in visiting various parts of the country, and, with his coadjutors in the Republican National Committee, had been openly and blatantly demand-

NEWBERRY CASE PUT ASIDE FOR FEW WEEKS

Watson Assails Ford and Is Denounced by John Sharp Williams in Debate.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—The Ford-Newberry senatorial election contest in Michigan was laid aside by the Senate last night probably not to come formally before the body again for several weeks. After a day of discussion, in which Henry Ford, who is contesting the seating of Senator Newberry, was both denounced and defended and which was enlivened by a heated tilt between Senators Williams of Mississippi and Watson, Georgia, Democrats, the election controversy was set aside to make way for the conference report on the revenue bill.

No agreement as to a date for a vote was reached, but the understanding developed that little further consideration would be given the case until late in December. By that time, Senators Pomerene of Ohio, who is leading the fight against seating Newberry, and King of Utah, both Democrats, expect to be back from the trip to Haiti and Santo Domingo, where a special committee is to make an investigation of naval administration of the island republics.

Advice From Tumulty.

The President and I discussed the situation in June, 1918, and I was asked by him to consider and work out what might be thought a tactful, effective plan by which the President, without arousing party rancor or bitterness, might make an appeal to the country, asking for its support. I considered the matter and under date of June 18, 1918, I wrote him a letter, part of which was given over to a discussion of the way it might discreetly be handled.

The White House,
Washington, June 18, 1918.

Dear Governor: I think the attitude of the leaders of the Republican party, as reflected in the speeches of Will Hays, National chairman, and Senator Penrose on Saturday, last, will give you the opportunity at the psychological moment to strike and to define the issue in this campaign. I think for the present our policy should be one of silence and even a show of indifference to what the leaders on the other side, Messrs. Hays and Penrose, are saying and doing. This will, no doubt, embolden them to make rash statements and charges, and by the time you are ready to make your general appeal, the whole country will realize how necessary it is for you frankly to ask for the re-election of the Democratic Congress. In a speech on Friday night, delivered at Philadelphia, in urging the election of a Republican Congress, Will Hays said: "We will bring the Government back to the limitations and principles of the Constitution in time of peace and establish policies which will again bind up the wounds of war, renew our prosperity, administer the affairs of government with the greatest economy, enlarge our strength at home and abroad, etc. * * *

Senator Penrose, at the same time urging a Republican Congress, said: "Let us keep up an efficient Republican organization in Pennsylvania and all through the United States, and make a successful Republican contest at every opportunity in every Congressional district and at the next presidential election, and endeavor to assure the election of Republican candidates."

I think these speeches will give you an opportunity some time in September or October frankly to state just what your attitude is toward the coming campaign, and thus lay before the country what the Republicans hope to gain by bringing about the election of a Republican Congress. I would suggest that some man of distinction in the country write you a letter calling your attention to partisan speeches of this character, emphasizing the parts I have mentioned, and ask your opinion with reference to the plan of the Republican party to regain power. In other words, we ought to accept these speeches charging incompetency and inefficiency as a challenge, and call the attention of the country to the fact that the leadership of the Republican party is still reactionary and standpat, laying particular emphasis on what the effect in Europe would be of a divided leadership at this time. I think a letter along the lines of the Indiana platform, which I suggested a few weeks ago, would carry to the country just the impression we ought to make. This letter should be issued, in my opinion, some time in September or October.

While it would seem from a reading of my confidential letter to the President that we were engaged in preparing the way for an appeal, we were simply doing what other administrations had done.

TOMOROW LAST DAY OF RED CROSS ANNUAL ROLL CALL

Finance Campaign Will Be Continued 10 Days After Local Drive for Memberships Cease.

The fifth Red Cross roll call will end in St. Louis tomorrow evening, but the finance campaign, which was begun with the roll call, will continue another week.

"It's your dollar that is going to make the roll call a success," is the final slogan of the campaign, and those who have not signed for the 1922 dollar membership dues are urged to do so tomorrow, either in the office buildings where the women are stationed in booths or at the roll call headquarters, Kinloch Building, Tenth and Locust streets.

Fifty cents of every dollar received for the annual memberships in the roll call will go to the National Red Cross for national and international relief, the remainder staying in St. Louis, along with all of the finance campaign proceeds.

Says Red Cross Helps Disabled.

Mrs. Frank V. Hammar, chairman of the St. Louis Chapter, addressed the disabled veterans last night at the United States Public Health Hospital, and another speaker was Maj. L. P. H. Barhenburg, who told the men that they would be badly off if it were not for the Red Cross. "The Government has no fund to supply recreations and many comforts which the Red Cross gives you," he said. "If the Red Cross has to stop its work, no one else will do it for I have no authority from the Government to permit any other organization than the Red Cross in here."

He told the men that complaints which had been made recently about the Red Cross stopping dances at the hospital and discontinuing distribution of tobacco, were unfair, as this had been done by order of the medical authorities. It was found that both dances and tobacco were having bad effects on the men with heart trouble, and the action was taken. "The Red Cross is always willing to give you everything within reason," Maj. Bahrenburg said.

GROCER LOCKED IN ICE BOX BY ROBBERS WHO TAKE $450

Two negroes entered the grocery of Bernard Barth at Newstead avenue and Hodiamont tracks at 8:20 o'clock last night and, at the point of a revolver in the hands of one, compelled Barth to go into the ice box. As they were departing, Arthur Fisher, 5059 Cates avenue, started to enter the store. The negroes ordered him to "beat it." He ran until he found a policeman. Going to the store, they released Barth, who said that the negroes had taken $450 from the cash register.

A man entered the saloon at 3044 Easton avenue at 8:10 p. m. and forced Carl Barnes, the bartender, into the ice box, stole $45.35 from the cash register and departed. Barnes was freed later by a customer.

Four negroes, two of whom had revolvers, held up Sinclair Donaldson of 2635 Washington avenue, at Washington and Leffingwell avenues at 8 p. m. and took $18, a stickpin and watch.

Three negroes robbed Herman Taurog, in his grocery at 3100 Thomas street of $120 and took $65 more from a cash register at 8:45 p. m. Taurog's clerk, John Smiley, was in the store at the time.

Jacob Gilden of 2738A Stoddard street was robbed of $4 and a watch at Garrison and Easton avenues at 9 p. m.

CHIROPRACTOR FINED $50 BY JURY, ANOTHER PLEADS GUILTY

Practicing Medicine Without Licenses Charged—Policewomen Are Witnesses.

Rudolph C. Olsen, 36 years old, a chiropractor at 3514 Connecticut street, was fined $50 by Judge Hochdoerfer yesterday upon his conviction by a jury of practicing medicine without a license.

Policewoman Minnie Anslyn testified that she went to Olsen's office with Policewoman Alice Buckley and that, after an examination, Olsen treated her for "curvature of the spine and liver trouble." She said that he agreed to give further treatments for $20 a month and that she paid $2 on account. Olson admitted that he had no license to practice medicine.

C. F. Govar of 2155 Allen avenue, a chirpractor, pleaded guilty of practicing medicine without a license and was fined $50 also.

A charge of practicing medicine without a license against Henry Thorne of 3908 Olive street, was nolle prossed before Judge Miller when the prosectuion found, after the examination of witnesses, that it could not establish payment of a fee.

Two Arrests in Liquor Case.

Henry Huning, 32 years old, a clerk in the soft-drink stand of Jerry L. Moreland at 303 East Shady avenue, Webster Groves, was arrested last night, after he had sold a drink of alleged whisky to a Webster Groves policeman. A half pint bottle containing the same liquid was found behind the bar. About an hour later Moreland was arrested on East Shady avenue, while on his way to the saloon, and a five-gallon can of alleged "moonshine" was found in a sack he carried. Both men were released on bond to appear before Justice of Peace Stecker next Tuesday.

Turpentine Ends Lumbago

Turpo, the Turpentine Ointment, drives away lumbago as if by magic! No more stiff, aching back! No more swollen muscles, drawn tendons! Turpo smooths away the pain. Gets right down deep and drives it out! Almost at once it stops those sharp pains that shoot down your back and side!

Science says that nothing penetrates as quickly as turpentine. New discovery, Turpo, combines all of turpentine's mysterious penetrating power with other wonderful healing agents. With such amazing quickness does Turpo act that when rubbed on the chest or throat a faint scent of turpentine can actually be noticed almost at once on the breath!

Turpo drives out lumbago, rheumatic pains, pleurisy, neuralgia and headache. Also breaks up colds, sore throat and croup. Turpo will not blister, burn or stain.

Take that "stitch" out of your back. Straighten up and feel yourself again. Get Turpo today from your druggist. Don't be without this Turpentine Ointment, containing those other old reliables, Menthol and Camphor. Turpo, 30c and 60c a jar.

INCOME TAX RULINGS TO SWELL REVENUE

Government May Realize Many Millions Under Three Supreme Court Decisions.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Decisions of the Supreme Court yesterday upholding Government contentions in three income tax cases will, in the opinion of Solicitor-General Beck and Treasury officials, go far toward unravelling many perplexing questions arising in stock dividend controversies and result in the recovery by the Government of many millions of dollars.

Two of the cases were similar and involved taxation as income of stock issued to stockholders of the Ohio Oil and the Prairie Oil and Gas companies by the Illinois and the Prairie Pipe Line companies, respectively.

The pipe line companies were organized by the oil companies after a decision by the Supreme Court that the Interstate Commerce and Federal Trade Commissions had jurisdictions over companies operating pipe lines. The Government contended the stock should be classed as income and taxed as such. This contention was opposed by the companies and various stockholders, including John D. Rockefeller.

Justice Pitney delivered the majority opinion of the Court, Justices Vanderventer and McReynolds dissenting. The majority opinion said:

"The new stock represented assets of the old company standing in the place of the pipe line properties that before had constituted portions of their surplus assets, and it was capable of division among the stockholders as the pipe line properties were not. The distribution constituted in the case of each individual a gain in the form of actual exchangeable assets. It was in substance and effect, not merely in form, a dividend of profits by the corporation and individual income to the stockholders."

The third case in which a decision was handed down grew out of the organization of the E. I. Du Pont de Nemours Powder Co. of Delaware by the parent company of the same name of New Jersey, which turned over to the Delaware corporation all its assets and took in exchange the stock of the new company, the Court holding the new stock which was distributed among the stockholders of the parent company subject to the income tax law.

Estimates were that the Government would obtain at least $20,000,000 in taxes from the litigants in the cases decided and the adjudication of many claims which have been pending in the Treasury Department, awaiting the outcome, would total many millions of dollars in addition.

HOTEL MEN SAY REDUCTION IN RATES IS IMPROBABLE

Convention of Missouri-Kansas-Oklahoma Association Will Close Tonight With Theater Party.

The tenth annual convention of the Missouri-Kansas-Oklahoma Hotel Men's Association, which began yesterday at the Hotel Statler, is continuing today with forenoon and afternoon sessions, and will close tonight with a theater party at the Jefferson and a supper and dance at the Jefferson Hotel.

There were 250 guests at the banquet at the Statler last night. State Senator Harold Van Orman of Evansville, Ind., spoke on "Americanism." E. M. Statler and Henry J. Bohn, editor of the Hotel World, also spoke.

In the assembly room was an elaborate display of chefs' creations, including a tower of three sizes of lobster, a block of ice hollowed and colored and filled with caviar and gilded cornucopia from which flowed a profusion of fruits. There was also a replica of the Statler, in pastry, 5 feet high, 3 feet wide and 2 feet deep. The ice cream was served in ice dishes, colored, and the cake in pastry dishes.

Visiting hotel men say there is no probability of a reduction of hotel rates because the cost of practically everything that enters into rates is still high and is likely to remain so.

TURKEYLESS MENUS FOR CITY WARDS THIS THANKSGIVING

Chicken to Be Served at Hospitals, Pork Shoulder and Ham at Other Institutions.

The Thanksgiving menus for inmates of city institutions were made up in the office of the Supply Commissioner today.

No turkey will be served, the price for many years having been prohibitive. Patients at the city hospital and Koch Hospital will have chicken, 750 pounds having been ordered for the former and 250 for the latter.

The inmates of the city sanitarium will be provided with 2675 pounds of pork shoulder. All others will get ham, 200 pounds for the infirmary, 224 for the workhouse and 150 for the jail.

Cranberries, mincemeat, apples and celery will be added at all the institutions.

Neighbors Help Put Out Fire.

Barefooted and clad in their night clothes neighbors fought the flames on the roof of the 10-room frame residence of Charles W. Casey, a lawyer, at 2857 Laclede Station road, St. Louis County, at 10:20 last night. The fire was discovered by Mrs. John H. Booth of 2825 Laclede Station road, who was passing on her way to a Manchester car, and who awakened the Casey family. Blankets and rugs soaked in water were used in beating out the flames. Damage was confined to the roof.

At Last! a Guide Book to Women

Written by Man Who Finds Them Mixture of Angel, Devil, Cat, Hen, Friend, Vampire, Mother, Sphinx — and the Eternal Unexpected.

By RUTH SNYDER.

IF you were a woman and were suddenly to see before your eyes a book entitled "Guide Book to Women," would you not be curious? And suppose that book was written by a man? Wouldn't you be anxious to read that book to find out what a mere man had to say about a subject so varied, so intricate and perhaps so dangerous?

And I, being a woman, decided to investigate and found the picture mirrored in this book by Mr. James James bizarre and ridiculous. We see the reflection of women apparently through a much cracked and dirty mirror and the effect is to long for a cleaner and newer glass.

thor, "that though there are guide books to everything else on earth there are no guide books to the most interesting thing in the world, Woman. There is not even a correct time-table of the dear thing.

"What a man doesn't know about women would fill volumes—at least it fills this volume. For it is generally admitted that man's ignorance of woman is appalling—which, of course, is a bit of luck for women."

Thus quotes the fly-leaf. But as you go further into this land of Women, traveling on Mr. James' caravan, we discover the mirage which has been painted to lead us on.

The author declares that when we speak of women we mean "the beautiful faces and appealing eyes and the curving, but not too curving, figure, and the mouth that mutely asks to be kissed and the body that seems to lack the support of our arms. Women mean the low neck and the short skirts, and all between these two degrees of latitude—especially in these days when there is so much latitude. Women mean youth and freshness and charm, and just a discreet hint of wickedness."

BUT—this is the way the author pictures women:

"Woman is a short-legged biped. • • • In woman the greatest diameter is some degrees below her equator, though there are exceptions who show more latitude in their northern hemisphere. A barrel is not a particularly alluring object, but it is to this general shape, excluding for the present her surface bumps, that she approximates. Yet no one objects to the shape of a barrel when it is full of beer; and all students of the sex should bear in mind that the other barrel is full of woman."

But, he argues, "what does it matter whether woman is beautiful or not, as long as she is there to kiss? And no woman was ever ugly when she was being kissed. Then, husbands, keep on kissing her!"

Mr. James has treated women from the standpoint of beauty, of dress, of work, of brains, of religion, of jobs, and has ventured to differentiate her types.

Some of his plainly meant to be witticisms are quoted below:

"The most important discovery yet recorded about woman is that she does not mean half what she looks, and does not mean anything she says."

"Woman says, 'Don't bother about looking at sunsets or rainbows. Look at me.' and man does, and he likes it."

"In the main man's judgment of a woman's frock is right. Man may not know about the details, but he knows about the effect. And he notices that the majority of women, no matter how smartly gowned they are, do not get the right effect."

"Woman is the eternal Bolshevist, the silken, sleek, untamable tiger roaming through the jungles of civilization, waving her sinuous tail invitingly in the air and purring sweetly, 'Chase me!' And we do—and it gives us an appetite."

"The modern man has at least a dozen pockets in his suit; he carries around with him a pencil, a fountain pen, a pocketbook or purse, a knife, a handkerchief, a corkscrew, a pipe, tobacco, keys, matches, bills, cash, stamps, love letters, a card case and a cigarette case. • • • But it is important to note that modern woman faces the world with none of the weapons and conveniences that civilization has provided for man. She goes valiantly through life armed only with a lipstick and a powder puff. And as a tribute to woman's ingenuity and resource, what a lot she can do with these trivial weapons."

"Marriages are not made in heaven; they are made haphazard. Your soulmate may be patiently waiting for you at the other side of the world, or he may not have been born yet, or died 100 years ago. But if you don't meet him you take somebody else, somebody handy. • • • A dozen assorted men would suit any woman for a husband—though possibly not all the whole dozen at once."

"Woman does not want to vamp, and even if she has inclinations that way she doesn't know her job. Her immemorial job is to ruin a man, but not by drink or other devilries. She ruins him by marriage. It is a much more satisfying and a much more complete method of ruining a man."

"Woman's brain has made her the supreme chatterer."

"Woman's sole (soul) is smaller than Man's, and of a different shape. It is not so wide in the tread, and is much more pointed. It is much thinner than a man's and consequently it wears out much sooner. And it never really keeps out the wet."

Finally we reach the end of the journey and Mr. James sums up Woman. "What is she?" he asks, "Angel? Animal? Comrade? Devil? Hen? Sphinx? Fool? Friend? Vampire? Cat? Comforter? Lover? Wife? Mistress? Mother? Is she our delight or our damnation—or both? Is she lust or love? Is she beauty or boredom?

"Let us say a little of each," he offers "cunningly mixed and spiced for the eager and diverse palate of malekind."

"Men (and here he offers his own excuse for the book) can tell her brutally the whole truth about her, and forget the only thing that matters—herself.

"Woman is a dangerous thing to let loose in the world; but then man was not to blame. We chain her up, in kitchens and in convents; we tie her to a cradle and confine her in a wedding ring. But she breaks loose and smashes things. And we love her for it all. She is the Eternal Unexpected.

"So, at the end of our analysis of this soft and complicated and yet simple being, we find that her soul and her meaning escapes us as it escapes herself; and thankfully, reverently and passionately we write her litle epitaph:

"'You little devil.'"

Nursing Rules for Baby

By Charlotte C. West, M. D.

REGULARITY in feeding is as important as that baby be given the proper kind and amount of nourishment suited to his especial needs, for every human being is a distinct entity from birth as I have tried to point out in these articles.

Now, many mothers err in this regard, and nurse the child whenever they happen to think of it or the baby is fretful. Worrisome babies are not healthy babies. The trouble is usually gastric discomfort and flatulence caused by an overloaded stomach. Yet mother places the baby to the breast again and again under the mistaken belief that it quiets him. It does quiet him for a few moments, as any attention will, but it also increases the underlying gastric discomfort, which is the cause of baby's irritibility.

Another bad habit is to nurse the child for an indefinite length of time. Never lie down for a nap with baby at the breast. The nap may consume an hour or more. Baby dozes and suckles, overloading his stomach, then is wakeful, cross and fretful through the night.

He must not be permitted to nurse longer than 15 minutes at each sitting, because the capacity of his stomach is very small.

At birth baby's stomach holds but 1½ to 2 ounces; at 3 months, 4½ ounces; at 6 months, 6 ounces; at 1 year, 9 ounces. Therefore the hours of feeding must be carefully regulated, as follows:

AGE.	Intervals.	Number night feedings	Number feedings 24 hours
First 4 weeks	2 hours	10	1
4 to 6 weeks	2 hours	9	1
6 to 8 weeks	2½ hours	8	1
2 to 4 months	2½ hours	7	0
4 to 10 months	3 hours	6	0
10 to 12 months	3 hours	5	0

Many women will object to omitting the night feeding, but this is not only required by the mother to insure her rest and undisturbed sleep, but to keep the milk in as liquid a state as is necessary for its proper digestion. Milk that is too solid causes colic.

Uncommon Sense

PROVINCIALISM.

PROVINCIALISM isn't confined to the dweller in a small town. It isn't confined to ignorance.

It is a state of mind which leads a person to think that his narrow sphere of knowledge is the only knowledge worth having.

The small-town man is called provincial because he regards people who live in cities as necessarily dissipated or extravagant.

He despises a way of living of which he knows nothing. He refuses to take the trouble to learn about it.

The city dweller thinks that people from small towns must be ignorant and narrow minded merely because they have never seen St. Paul's Cathedral or the Woolworth Building.

Many of the American doughboys who went to France regarded the French as stupid and narrow minded merely because they couldn't understand sentences addressed to them in English.

The French on their part were impatient of soldiers who wanted to eat vast breakfasts of meat and potatoes and griddle cakes as soon as they got out of bed in the morning.

You find provincialism in every place where men do not think enough.

Nowhere is it more virulent than among a certain sort of highly educated college professors, who regard the sort of learning they possess as the only learning worth having.

Seward, the learned American statesman, looked upon Abraham Lincoln as provincial when reluctantly he entered Lincoln's Cabinet.

Only after years did he discover that Lincoln, though he spoke with a small-town accent, and did many things uncouthly, possessed a mind superior in quality to that of any living American.

Provincialism is always the mark of the narrow mind, whether it belongs to the educated or to the ignorant.

It arises from a lack of sympathy with others—from a lack of understanding of them.

Always it is a bar to full development—always does it stand in the way of really great achievement.

You can do nothing important for people unless you know them. You can never know them if you in any degree despise them.

Be sure before you consider others provincial that the thing that makes you hold that opinion isn't a touch of provincialism in your own make-up.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Why the Hunter Got No Ducks

By THORNTON W. BURGESS.

The hunter may be out of luck
But think a moment of the Duck.
—Farmer Brown's Boy.

THE hunter, who had come down the Big River in a boat and landed near the place where Dusky the Black Duck and his flock had found nice yellow corn scattered in the rushes night after night, saw Blacky the Crow leave the top of a certain tree as he approached.

"It is well for you that you din't wait for me to get nearer," said the hunter. "You are smart enough to know that you can't play the same trick on me twice. You frightened those ducks away last night, but if you try it again you'll be shot as sure as your coat is black."

Then the hunter went to his blind, which, you know, was the hiding-place he had made of bushes and rushes, and behind this he sat down with his terrible gun to wait and watch for Dusky the Black Duck and his flock.

Now you remember that further along the shore of the Big River was Farmer Brown's Boy, hiding in a blind he had made that afternoon. The hunter couldn't see him at all. He didn't have the least idea that any one else was anywhere near. "With that Crow out of the way I think I will get some Ducks tonight," thought the hunter, and looked at his gun to make sure that it was all ready.

Over in the west jolly, round, red Mr. Sun started to go to bed behind the Purple Hills, and the Black Shadows came creeping out. Far down the Big River the hunter saw a swiftly moving black line just above the water. "Here they come," he muttered, as he eagerly watched that black line draw nearer.

Twice those big black birds circled around over the Big River opposite where the hunter was crouching behind his blind. It was plain that Dusky, their leader, remembered Blacky the Crow's warning the night before. But this time there was no warning. Everything appeared safe. Once more the flock circled and then headed straight for that place where they hoped to find more corn. The hunter crouched lower. They were almost near enough for him to shoot when "Bang, bang!" went a gun a short distance away.

Instantly Dusky and his flock turned and on swift wings swung off and up the river. If ever there was a disappointed hunter it was the one crouching in that blind. "Somebody else is hunting and he spoiled my shot that time," he muttered. "He must have a blind farther down. Probably some other ducks I didn't see came in to him. I wonder if he got them. Here's hoping that next time those Ducks come in here first."

He once more made himself comfortable and settled down for a long wait. The Black Shadows crept out from the further bank of the Big River. Jolly, round, red Mr. Sun had gone to bed and the first little star was twinkling high overhead. It was very still and peaceful. From out in the middle of the Big River sounded a low "quack." Dusky and his flock were swimming in this time. Presently the hunter could see a silver line on the water and then he made out nine black spots. In a few minutes those Ducks would be where he could shoot them.

"Bang, bang!" went that gun below him again. With a roar of wings Dusky and his flock were in the air and away. That hunter stood up and said things, and they were not nice things. He knew that those Ducks would not come back again that night and that once more he must go home empty-handed. But first he would find out who that other hunter was and what luck he had had. So he tramped down the shore to where that gun had seemed to be. He found the blind of Farmer Brown's Boy, but there was no one there. You see, as soon as he had fired his gun the last time Farmer Brown's Boy had slipped out and away. And as he tramped across the Green Meadows toward home with his gun he chuckled. "He didn't get those Ducks this time," said Farmer Brown's Boy.

Dress Rules for School Teachers in Kansas

THE young woman who wears slashed skirts, rolled stockings and other extremes of fashion is just as much a menace to the youth of the land as the man who smokes cigarettes, cigars or a pipe, and neither should be permitted to teach school. This is the view of Miss Lizzie Wooster, State Superintendent of Public Instruction in Kansas. Miss Wooster began a campaign two years ago against the man school teacher who smoked and she has succeeded in keeping a lot of men out of teaching jobs because of the tobacco habit. It was not enough that they never smoked while on the school grounds or that they confined their puffs to the privacy of their own homes. The fact that they smoked or used tobacco in any form was sufficient to warrant the State Superintendent asking the school boards to dismiss the offending teachers. A considerable number of school boards are known to have followed the instructions of the State Superintendent.

Now Miss Wooster is going to get the jobs of the fashionably attired school marms, since she was reasonably successful in banishing tobacco from the list of vices of the schoolmasters of the State. She has announced that there is in course of preparation a manual of proper dress for the school teachers. The manual will be published by the State and a copy will be placed in the hands of every school teacher and every prospective teacher who seeks the certificates authorizing employment in the public schools.

"The manual is being prepared at the request of many of the school boards, the Women's Christian Temperance Union and many of the city federations of women's clubs," said Miss Wooster. "This manual will set out specific statements as to the proper dress for teachers in the public schools of Kansas.

"The teachers help set the examples for the young boys and girls in the schools. The man who is a successful teacher is bound to have a large following of boys who will think it proper and manly to imitate him. And if he smokes the boys will regard it as a proper and even natural attribute to manliness for them to smoke also.

"The women teachers are ample to the girls of the and the school boards tolerate rolled stockings, waists, the slashed skirts revealing garments which

BRIAND'S ELOQUENT SPEECH, TELLING OF FRANCE'S PLAN TO REDUCE ARMY

Constant Menace From German Imperialists Has Made Big Force Necessary, Premier Declares

POLICE ORGANIZATIONS SAID TO CONSTITUTE FRAMEWORK FOR QUICK MOBILIZATION

France Would Do Anything to Assure Peace, but Berlin Government Is Weak, and France Must Protect Self, Prime Minister Says.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.

THE official interpretation of the address of Premier Briand of France at yesterday's plenary session of the armament conference follows:

"Gentlemen: You will readily admit that I, as a delegate of France, should feel moved when rising to speak from this full-sounding platform, whence every word that is said goes to the attentive and anxious ear of the world and of all civilized people.

"I wish, first of all, to thank my colleagues of the conference who on the opening of this public meeting, so kindly allowed me to speak as the representative of my country.

"I shall endeavor to make it appear to your eyes and to the eyes of the world with its true genuine face as it is; that will show you that she is ready, and I might say perhaps more ready than any other country, to direct attention and her earnest will to whatever steps may be thought desirable in order to insure final peace of the world. Nothing for my colleagues and myself would be more pleasant than to be able to tell you this: We bring here sacrifices to the fullest extent possible. We have our own security insured. We lay down arms. We should be so happy to be able to make that gesture in order to participate in the final disarmament of the world.

"France Wants Peace."

"Unfortunately, we cannot speak in this way. I say also, unfortunately, we have not the right to do so. I shall briefly explain later on for what reasons, I shall tell you for France that she wants to make peace. If you want to make peace, there must be two people, yourself and the neighbor opposite. To make peace—I am speaking, of course, of land armament—it is not sufficient to reduce effectives, and decrease war material.

"That is the physical side, a physical aspect of things. There is another consideration which we have no right to neglect in such a problem, that touches vital questions which are of the most serious character for the country concerned. It is necessary that, besides this physical disarmament, there should be in those same circles what I shall call a general atmosphere of peace. In other words, a moral disarmament is as necessary as the material one. I have the right to say this, and I hope to be able to prove it to you. And I have the right to say to you that in Europe, as it is at present, there are serious elements of instability, there are such conditions prevailing that France is obliged to face them, and to contemplate the necessary matters from the point of view of her own security.

"Americans Know France."

"I am now staying in a country, many of the men of which have already enjoyed the opportunity of seeing France and knowing exactly what she is. They came to us in the most critical time of the war. They came and shed their blood—mingled their blood—with ours, and they shared our life, and they have seen France, and they now know what France is. And certainly these men have contributed to enlighten their own countrymen, and they have done everything to dispel and drive away those noxious gases which have been spread about and under which certain people have been trying to mask and to conceal the true face of France.

"Here in this country you are living among states which do not know the entangled barriers and frontiers of Europe. Here you live in an immense expanse of space. You do not know any factions on your own land. You have nothing to fear. So that it is rather difficult for some of you—it must be difficult for some of you—to realize what are the conditions at present prevailing in Europe, after war and after victory.

Denial of Military Aims.

"I quite admit that every citizen of the United States should come and tell me this: 'The war is won. Peace is signed. Germany has reduced her army to a great extent. Most of her war material has been destroyed. What is it that prevents peace from now reigning in Europe?' Why is it that France keeps such a considerable army, abundantly provided with war material?

"Of course, in saying this, only certain people have got something at the back of their minds. They suggest that France also has some hidden thought—some hidden design. It has been said that France wanted to install in Europe a sort of military supremacy, and that after all she wanted to do so simply to take the place Germany occupied before the war. Gentlemen, perhaps this is the most painful, heartrending and cruel thing that a Frenchman can hear.

"Desire Is Peace."

"And for them to say after the direful war from which we have just emerged—unprovoked war which we had to undergo—to be again in the cruel necessity to give to the world only the appearance that we have perfidious intentions and military designs—this, gentlemen, constitutes, I may say, the most disheartening thing for us. If we had not the full confidence of those that know my country, those that have seen it—they can testify that not one word of it is true. If there is a country that has deliberately turned her steps toward peace, that wants peace with all her heart, believes in it with her entire faith—if there is a country that does this, gentlemen, it is France.

"Since the armistice we have had many disappointments. France has had to wait for certain realizations which she has not been able to get. She has seen Germany digress—haggle over the signature which had been given. Germany has refused to stand by her pledged word. She has refused to pay compensation due for the devastated regions. She has declined to make the gesture of chastisement that after all every man of sense would expect after the horrors that we have witnessed. Germany has refused to disarm. At that time France was strong and Germany could not resist. Public opinion in France was naturally impatient, while under this provocation France remained perfectly cool. There was not one gesture on her part to aggravate the situation. I may say here, emphatically, in the face of the world, we have no hatred in our hearts and France will do everything she can. She will use every means to prevent between Germany and herself a recurrence of those bloody conflicts. She wishes for nothing else but that the two peoples should be able to live side by side in the normal conditions of peace. But after all we have no right to forget. We have no right to abandon ourselves. We have no right to weaken our position.

The Moral Aspect.

"Gentlemen, I spoke a few minutes ago of the moral aspect of disarmament, and I referred in my remarks to Germany. I do not want to be unjust; nothing is further from my mind. But we know there is in Germany—there is one part of Germany that is for peace. There are many people, especially among the working classes, who want to work, who have had enough of this war, who have had enough of war altogether and are most anxious to settle down in peace, and also to set to work. We shall do everything to help that Germany, and if she wants to restore her balance in the bosom of a Pacific republic and democratic institutions, we can help her, and we shall be able to contemplate the future with feelings of security.

The Other Germany.

"But, gentlemen, there is another Germany, a Germany which has not changed her mind and to which the last war has taught no lesson. That Germany keeps thoughts in the back of her mind; she has the same designs which she entertained before the war; she has kept the same preoccupations and she cherishes the same ambitions as the Hohenzollerns did. And how can we close our eyes to this? How can we ignore this state of things? This, gentlemen, is happening at our very doors, we have only got to look. This is happening but a few miles from us, and we follow the thoughts of the Germans, or certain Germans, and the evolution which is taking place. And more than that, we have witnessed certain attempts to return to the state of things. Nobody could be mistaken about the real bearing of what was called the Kapp Putsch. We know very well that if it had succeeded, Germany would have returned to her pre-war state, and we do not know what might have happened, or rather we know too well what would have been the consequences of such a state of things.

"Gentlemen, a volume has been published by no less a man than Field Marshal Ludendorff, who still enjoys great authority in many German circles, and who is followed by a great part of the elite in Germany, professors, philosophers, writers, etc. What do we read in this book? Gentlemen, I should not like to make too many quotations. I should not like to prolong this speech, and perhaps draw too much of your attention, but this is part of my brief, and if you are, like me, convinced that the moral element is of the utmost importance, you will allow me to read just two or three passages. This is the first quotation:

"It is necessary that we should learn to understand that we live in a warlike time; that struggle will remain forever for the single individual as for the state, a natural phenomenon, and that the struggle is equally on the divine order of the world."

Quotes Ludendorff.

"In the same book Marshal Ludendorff produces these terrible words of De Molcke on the 11th of December, 1910:

"'Eternal peace is a dream. It is not even a beautiful dream, and war is one of the parts of the order of the world, such as it has been created by God. It is by war that are developed the noblest virtues of man, courage, disinterestedness, devotion to duty and spirit of sacrifice, up to the abandonment of one's own life. Without war the world would sink in the morass of materialism.'

"And further—this is Marshal Ludendorff himself speaking now:

"'It is for the political education of the German people, and it is an indispensable notion, with the knowledge of this fact, that in the future war will be the last and the only decisive means of policy, that thought completed by the virile life of war, the Entente shall not be able to forbid the German people to entertain it, although they are trying to take it away from us. War is the cornerstone of all intelligent policy. It is the cornerstone of every form of future event, and chiefly of the future of the German people.'

"And, lastly, Marshal Ludendorff says this:

"'The warlike qualities of the Prussian and German army have been put to the proof on the bloody battlefields. The German people need no other qualities for their moral renovation. The spirit of the former army must be the germ which will allow this renovation to take place.'

How Can We Close Eyes?

"Such, gentlemen, are the words used by the highest German authorities who have preserved, and I can quite understand it, the full part, the great part at least, of the confidence of the German people, and that is what we are listening to now, after a war that has caused the death of millions of men, after the sore wounds that have been inflicted and that are still bleeding in the sides of the countries of Europe; that is the sort of thing that is being taught at the very door of France. How can you expect that France should close her eyes to such words?

"I now come to the physical aspects of disarmament. I can quite understand that somebody might say it is not sufficient to harbor evil designs; to make war one must have appropriate means, because when it is a question of war enormous effectives are necessary; you must have the officers and noncommissioned officers; you must have plentiful material—rifles, guns, machine guns, artillery, etc.—and Germany has no longer any of these. Germany, from the point of view of effectives, just emerging from the war, from a war where her men have been fighting for four years—and I should be the last to underestimate the valor of her soldiers—our soldiers have had to face and to fight the German soldiers and they know to what point the German soldier is able to carry his heroism. But Germany, just issuing from the war, still has 7,000,000 men over there in Germany who have made war. Of course, you will say, they are not actually serving under the flag; they are not living in barracks. Certainly. Have these men any officers and non-commissioned officers ready to be marshaled to the field? Is it possible to mobilize such an army tomorrow?

German Police Force.

"To this question, I answer yes, and I am going to explain it. Since the war, since the moment peace was signed, Germany has constituted a force, a so-called police force, which was intended for the maintenance of public order. That force is called the Reichswehr. It is to include 100,000 men, and in fact does include 100,000 men. But what men? They are nearly all officers or noncommissioned officers. I mean, gentlemen, regulars, all having served in or having belonged to the old army. Therefore, the cadres are ready there, the officers and noncommissioned officers are ready to marshal the army of tomorrow.

"And what is that army? Is it in conformity with the requirements of the peace treaty? Is it only for purposes of public order? No.

"According to secret instructions issued by the military authorities the Reichswehr is to prepare not only for police purposes but also for war, and is to train for war, with the necessary rehearsals and maneuvers.

"There is something more. Germany has another denomination, there is another group called Einwohnerwehr. This group includes almost all the men of good will who are ready to serve their country in time of need, and instead of using it only to preserve internal order, it might be used for other purposes.

"The danger was so real that the allies were obliged to send an ultimatum to Germany to demand this force should be disarmed.

"Government Weak."

"At another moment, under an organization called the Ugesch, which is the organization of war, the Einwohnerwehr acquired such strength and became such a threat that the Prime Minister of Bavaria, animated by a spirit of revolt, informed the world that he had at his disposal and he could raise in a short time an army of 300,000, plentifully provided with rifles, machine guns and artillery. Well, that force has been disorganized. The German Government has done its duty, and nobody more than myself is ready to recognize it. It is only a duty on my part, a mere duty; a mere sense of fair play. I stated it in my own Parliament. I am ready to recognize that the German Chancellor, Chancellor Wirth, is a man of good will, animated by fair purposes, loyal and frank, and that he has applied every endeavor, acting with no small merit on his part, in order to really realize a state of peace, and honor the signature of Germany. But this Government in Germany is weak. It is being watched. Snares are laid in their path and they might fall at any moment.

"While I may say on our side we are ready to do everything in order to allow this great people to return to normal conditions of peace, and the German Government, as I said, dissolved the Einwohnerwehr, there is something else, gentlemen. There is another force, which is called the Chezheitz Politze. That is also a police force. It includes 150,000 men. These are enlisted men, the force is composed almost exclusively of regulars, officers and noncommissioned officers, or at least noncommissioned officers ready to undergo a new period of military service. We demanded the dissolution of this force, but what happened? The Chezheitz Politze disappeared, but another came in its place—Schutz Politze; but it was just the same, that included 150,000 men. So that, instead of its being a police force, it became a general police force at the disposal of the central Government, that could be used anywhere on German territory; so that we come to a total of 250,000 men, and enough men that are real officers, ready to marshal the troops who are training to be ready instantly in case of war. These men are constantly watched by the Government.

Could Mobilize Quickly.

The Government keeps them under their hands, these 7,000,000 men have not returned to civil life, to civil occupations, entirely. They are grouped together, in this marvelously ingenuous way which the German people always have when they want to achieve their purposes. They are called Frei Corps, or former combatants' associations, and what not. Any day, any anniversary—and Germans are rather fond of anniversaries—is favorable in order to convene these men and marshal them to see that you have got them under your hand, ready to do the work that is to be done. We are Frenchmen. We know that. It is happening at our door. And I will only give you an example to show you how rapidly these organizations might be put on a war footing. Just one second. When the Upper Silesian question reached a somewhat acute stage recently, within a few weeks, I might almost say within a few days, there were, out of these Frei Corps and other bodies, about 40,000 men ready with guns, machine guns, rifles, armored trains, and with almost perfect military instruments, so that this force should have its full combatant value. These are facts, gentlemen. I am not noticing them and bringing them here just to make my case better. They are facts that have been verified, and that everybody can ascertain for himself. Therefore, as a question of fact and from the point of view of effectives, Germany can raise, in a few weeks, and perhaps almost in a few days, and can begin to raise her 6,000,000 or 7,000,000 men with their officers again, and the noncommissioned officers are ready to do the work and to help.

"We Can't Weaken Ourselves."

"Now, I must ask the great people of the United States, so fond of justice, so noble in their purposes, to answer me when I tell them this: Suppose that by your side, oh, American people, a nation, a nation which has been for years and centuries in bloody conflict with you; and suppose that this nation, you feel, is still ready, morally and materially, to enter into a new struggle. What would you do? Would you turn away your eyes? Would you close your eyes to a danger that was threatening you? You that are said to be such a positive, such a precise people, would you close your eyes? Would you not desire to do everything in your power in order to safeguard your life, and, what is more, your honor? Would you do anything to weaken yourselves? No. There is not one citizen in the whole United States would not answer me, 'No, never in the world!'

"France is looking upon what is happening. France does not exaggerate. She is only watching and waiting.

"I now come to the question of war material. We have been told that there was no more war material. It is true, the commissions of control in Germany have done admirable work. A great many guns—artillery, I mean—have been destroyed. Some of the destruction has been supervised by the allied officers. It is real.

"Other destruction has taken place, as we have been told. We might have a doubt. We are not quite certain. But we must give the opponents the benefit of the doubt, and we believe the destruction on that side is practically completed.

War Materials.

"But the problem of war material is one that can easily be solved. You have seen, in the war, with what promptitude—and that was lucky, because if help had not come so quickly we might have been down, finally—you have seen how quickly immense armies have come over to us, provided with the most modern material, and fought on our sides upon the battlefields.

"Well, what is Germany but a vast country of industry—industrially organized? Germany always had two aims, the first was trade, commerce, and that is only natural. The second was war. All her industries, all her manufactures, have been working to the full during the war and they have developed since.

"Everything is ready in Germany. The plans, the designs and calibers. Everything is there ready to insure a steady manufacturing of guns, machine guns and rifles. Suppose that during a period of diplomatic tension, purposely protracted for a number of weeks, certain of the manufacturers, certain of the works, began to fabricate, just at the beginning, just to start the war, just to set the war going, and then go on manufacturing guns and rifles and artillery, what would happen? It is not only in Germany that industry can work to the full. You can make preparations outside. In fact, preparations have actually taken place. In fact, great captains of industry or great industrial magnates have bought important firms in Scandinavia and in other parts of Europe. It is easy enough to fabricate these guns without our seeing it, outside of our supervision. You know very well that it is possible to build great railroads. You know very well that it is impossible to bring here the proof that Germany is not actually making or purchasing war materials. It is different for the navy. It is rather difficult to lay the keel of the ship in the stocks, to prepare the dockyards without the world knowing it. But suppose that was possible. Do you think you could launch a capital ship without somebody being on the spot and knowing what was happening? But the guns, the rifles, the machine guns—any instruments used on the field of battle—they can be manufactured and cannot be controlled with any measure of certainty.

"Prussia Disarmed Before."

"Ah, gentlemen, this is not the first time in history that France has had to face a situation of this kind. We have known Prussia disarmed, and disarmed by whom? By Napoleon. Well, that Prussia, which seemed practically disarmed, which was harmless to all intents and purposes, we found her again on the battlefield and we were nearly bled white. How can we forget that?

"Of course, we know what is often said of the French people. It is often said that we are a frivolous nation and that naturally, when the danger is passed, we turn our minds to other things—just as befits a frivolous people.

"Evidently, gentlemen, we are not the sort of men to keep our eyes steadily fixed on whatever is sad and depressing. We have not been doing that since the war, but we have been too deeply wounded, I might almost say murdered, to forget the direful lesson which has just been taught us. Gentlemen, there are too many homes in mourning in this country, there are too many men in the streets that are disabled and maimed. Even if we wanted to forget, we could not.

"Therefore, we have not the right and we do not intend to leave France defenseless. France must, to all intents and purposes, protect herself.

"Smoldering Fire in Europe."

"Such is the situation as far as we are concerned. You will grant me, gentlemen, that it is serious enough. But that is not all. But what about the rest of Europe? Apparently Europe is at peace, although here and there on the ground certain volumes of smoke just arising seem to indicate that the fire is not extinguished everywhere. I might say that this fire is smouldering in certain parts of Europe, and if France had not had an army war would already have broken out in Europe again.

Reference to Russia.

"I will just draw your attention to one subject to which I may refer later on, and that is the subject of Russia. Russia is a country of 120,000,000 men, which is actually boiling over with anarchy. They have an enormous standing army, which is in theory a million and a half men, but which has a practical strength of 600,000 men. What will Russia do? Who can say what will happen on that side? About a year and a half ago there was a wild rush of Russia on Europe. Russia tried to rush Poland and through Poland to reach Germany, where some people were beckoning to them. Gentlemen, we at that time knew terribly anxious hours in France. If the barrier had not held good, if that anarchic army had been able to join the people who were calling them on the other side, what would have happened? Where would France be and where would the rest of Europe be? Happily, there was the French army, which was the soldier of order for its own account and for the sake of the world.

"The situation in Russia is far from being settled. It is a sort of permanent anxiety to everybody. What will become of its enormous army? What could, or might, Germany do in order to equip Russia and exploit her? We know now. There are so many problems, economic, financial, etc., with which we have to deal, that really, gentlemen, we do not know to which to turn, but the greatest problem of all, the greatest question is life, first of all we must be able to live. That is sort of a question mark in France. Thanks to our allies, to whom our gratitude will remain everlasting—thanks to their efforts, we have been able altogether to insure the life, liberty and dignity of men, but, gentlemen, I trust you will certainly feel the weight of my argument and recognize that we are faced with a very terribly serious situation.

Naval Disarmament.

"When we say we contemplate a reduction of naval armaments, when we discuss it with ourselves, heart to heart, we could have nothing else in our minds, we were speaking between friends. There is no threat of war; if there is any menace to peace, it is so far distant that you can hardly conceive it, and yet you have not assumed the rights of ignoring this danger altogether. You intend to keep your navies to the extent necessary to defend your liberties and insure your life.

"While, if you do that, gentlemen, on the sea, what shall we do when the danger is there at our doors and hanging over our heads?

"If there were any statesmen—and as one, I may say that I have always been in favor of peace; I have assumed powers for the sake of peace in very difficult conditions, where my country was feeling natural impatience at the state of things; I formally attached myself to the cause of peace. I fastened my heart on that noble task, and I may say that if ever

Arthur Balfour's Response to Address of Premier Briand

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.
By the Associated Press.

THE response of Arthur J. Balfour, head of the British delegation, to Briand's speech at yesterday's plenary session of the armament conference, follows:

"Mr. Chairman, evidently this is not a fitting moment to deal at length or in detail with the great speech which has just come to its conclusion. It has been your privilege, and my privilege, to hear one of the great masters of parliamentary oratory. We have heard him with admiration, we have heard him with a full measure of sympathy, but we have done much more, I think, than merely been the auditors of a great, artistic performance; we have heard something more than a great speech, we have heard a perfectly candid, perfectly lucid, perfectly unmistakable exposition of the inmost thoughts of the Prime Minister of our great ally. He has told us, I believe without reserve, what are the anxieties, preoccupations, of the country over whose destinies he presides. He has told what they fear and why they fear it, and nothing can be more useful, more instructive to us of other nations, than to have this full revelation.

Position of French.

"We live under very different conditions from the French citizens. In the secure homes of America no terrors exist or can exist comparable to those which inevitably haunt the thoughts, waking and sleeping, of the leaders of French politics; for they have what neither you in America nor we in England have. I do not venture to speak for the other nations represented around the table. They have at their very doors the great country, great in spite of defeat, powerful in spite of losses, and of its policy, of the course which it means to pursue in the future, they necessarily remain in anxious doubt.

"It is good for us all, I venture to say, from whatever nation we may be drawn, from whatever part of this great continent we come, that we should be initiated, as we have been this morning, into the inner sanctuary of French policy.

"It must be acknowledged, sorrowfully, that the speech to which we have just listened is not hopeful for any immediate solution of the great problem of land armament. And why is it—why is it that there is this great difference between land armaments and sea armaments? Why is it that we all here look forward with a confidence, which I think is not overrated, a serene confidence, to bringing about as a result of our deliberations some great measure, and under the guidance of the program laid before you by the United States Government, why is it we are hopeful of coming to some solution of the great naval problem?

Land Disarmament.

"It is because, in the language of M. Briand, there has been, in matters maritime, a moral disarmament, and it 's on the basis of the moral disarmament that the physical and material disarmament is going to be built. That is why we are hopeful about the naval question. And why are we less hopeful about at least any immediate settlement of the military question? It is because, as M. Briand has explained to you, in that case there has not been moral disarmament, because we have no assurance, or because the French Government, who watch these things closely, have no assurance, either in Russia or in Germany, that moral disarmament has made the degree of progress which would make material disarmament an immediate possibility.

"I do not venture to offer an opinion of my own upon this question. I leave you to judge of the facts, as they have been expounded by one who has profoundly studied them and whose gifts of exposition cannot be excelled.

"Only this I would say, for I need hardly tell you that I am not going to make a speech. M. Briand appears to have some fears lest France should feel herself in moral isolation.. That would be a tragedy, indeed.

"That the liberties of Europe and the world in general, and of France in particular, should be maintained and guarded against the dominating policy of her eastern neighbor is the cause for which the British Empire fought and in which the British Empire still believes.

"Killed on the field of battle, we lost nearly a million men. I am talking of the British empire now. We lost nearly a million men. We lost well over 2,000,000 men in addition, maimed and wounded.

"No Repenting of Sacrifice."

"We grieve over the sacrifice; we do not repent it, and if the cause of international liberty was worthy of this immense sacrifice from one of the allied Powers—I speak not of others, it is not my right to speak for them—if it deserved and required this sacrifice from one of the allied and associated Powers, and if we at all events have not changed our views either as to the righteousness of the war or as to its necessity, how can it be otherwise than, if a similar necessity should again arise, if again the lust of domination, which has been the curse of Europe for so many generations, should threaten the peace, the independence, the self-development of our neighbors and allies, how should it be possible that the sympathies, once so warm, should become refrigerated, should become cold, and that we who had done so much for the great cause of international liberty, should see that cause perish before our eyes rather than make further sacrifices in its defense?

"Those are the thoughts which rise in my mind after hearing the great speech of M. Briand. I should only be interfering, should only be weakening, its effect, were I to deal further upon them, and I will content myself, therefore, with thanking M. Briand for the admirable and candid account which he has given of the policy of his country, and wishing him and his country every success and every prosperity in that path of unaggressive prosperity which I hope and believe they are now entering."

PRESS COMMENT IN LONDON ON BRIAND'S SPEECH

Papers Divided Along Usual Lines, Some Indorsing France's Position on Size of Her Army.

OTHERS DECLARE NATION MILITARISTIC

Sympathy With People Expressed by Those Newspapers That Distrust the Germans.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—In commenting on Premier Briand's speech before the Washington conference, London morning newspapers follow the respective attitudes which they have maintained toward France's policy in keeping a big army. There is one section of opinion which sees in France a militaristic, revengeful spirit and another which is constantly distrustful of Germany and consequently regards France as justified in keeping prepared for a possible fresh attack.

The Times, always skeptical as to Germany's actual disarmament, says: "With a chronic menace hanging over her, it would be criminal folly for France to relax her vigilance," and, referring to Secretary Hughes' remarks about safety for the institutions of liberty, says:

"The institutions of liberty will not be safe until Germany undergoes a change of heart."

The Daily Mail comments in a similar vein, and the Daily Telegraph is also sympathetic with France's position. Reviewing the existing military situation in Europe, the latter newspaper says: "The idea of limitation of land armaments by agreement is confined at present to the world of ideas * * * The matter is not yet ripe for international action."

"France Can Count on Support."

The Daily Chronicle, on the other hand, assures France that although the American Senate rejected the suggestion for a joint American-English guarantee, she can count certainly upon the support of both of them in the event of German aggression. The newspaper says that, when French statesmen speak of further disarming Germany, one would like to know just what they mean, and what they would wish done that has not already been done.

France is accused by the same newspaper of maintaining a hostile policy toward Russia "with the sort of hostility which tends to perpetuate what it opposes." The Washington conference, according to the Daily Express, is "among the shoals." This newspaper sees little hope of France placing herself "among the idealists," and says no power can expect to receive benefits unless it make sacrifices. It adds: "If the self-denial of the Powers is to be limited to the expectation of sacrifices by others, it were better that the conference had never met."

French Papers Heartily Indorse Briand's Speech on Army.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Nov. 22.—"France speaks through the mouth of Briand," is the almost universal caption in the Paris morning newspapers over the account of the French Premier's address at the Washington conference. This caption, embodying the sense of satisfaction with which the speech is hailed here, comprises almost the only comment, the cabled text arriving so late as to preclude extended discussions. The only exception to this favorable tone is taken by the Communist newspaper L'Humanite, which uses the headline "Briand Defends France's Militarism."

"Briand pleaded for France before the conference; he pleaded well and won his case," says the Figaro.

In the same vein is the comment of L'Ouevre, a widely read newspaper, which says "To convince his hearers he had only to reveal to the the real heart of France."

While the comment was restricted, the newspapers' manner or representing the speech showed an unmistakable hearty indorsement of M. Briand's words as a statement of France's position in regard to land armaments.

The daily installment of Joseph P. Tumulty's book, "Woodrow Wilson as I Know Him," which usually appears on this page, will be found on pages 16, 17 and 18.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

The Canadian Border.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I WOULD like to call attention to note published in your paper a few days ago signed by "Am I Rite."

This is a fair example of that suspicious attitude in mortals that always impugns some treacherous motive in a charitable offer by the other side and has done more to perpetuate wars than anything else. For instance, the United States could have seen a trick fostered by Canada or vice versa for the purpose of invading the other country in the proposed treaty a hundred years ago between the two countries for an absolutely unfortified boundary, but fortunately men of vision prevailed on both sides, men who did not look back on a sad human history of continuous warfare and say: "War has always prevailed and always will."

Those patriots knew that most men could be trusted and had faith that in a new method of international dealings founded on humane principles future relations between nations would be founded.

He also says that the conference simply means a reduction of taxes. I agree with him on this point, but why does he not continue along same lines and say that unless all countries disarm except for defensive purposes it means new wars soon and so terrible that civilization itself will probably be destroyed. This is not alarmest bunk, but the consensus of opinion of the world's best financiers and military men. For instance: Gen. Pershing says that "it is a question whether civilization has not reached a point where it is about to destroy itself.

"Am I Rite" is wrong. N. W.

The Road to Normalcy.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

PRESIDENT HARDING and his able Secretary of State, Mr. Hughes, have earned the gratitude of the progressive nations of the world. Mr. Hughes has dealt a death blow to Harveyism and Prussianism from which they will never recover. The reactionary element in the Republican and Democratic parties who have advocated preparedness for war will now find it necessary to seek other political fields of action, such as the South Sea Islands, with their "splendid isolation."

Our national administration has learned a lesson from the World War—that no nation can arrogate to itself a selfish economic policy of military and naval preparedness and exercise dominion over the high seas by suppressing the legitimate commercial aspirations of other independent nations without sooner or later paying a dear price. Germany failed to accomplish it; and so will any other nation fail.

Every progressive Republican and Democrat should resent any attempt by the partisan politician to capitalize such vital international and national aspirations for political gain. Recently we had one disastrous experience of bitter partisan politics by a reactionary group of war profiteers, and we surely don't want any more partisan hypocrisy about "entangling alliance" when other independents wish to form a League of Nations for the preservation of world peace. Our national Government is now on the straight road to normalcy and prosperity. R. W. HELMES.

Woman's Place.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THE home may be woman's world, but the census man tells us that almost one out of every three women in St. Louis is a wage earner. Wage workers not because they like that kind of a life, but because necessity compels them to make their own living. Deep down in the heart of every human being is a passionate love for a home. One cannot conceive of home without the marriage relation, with prattling children whose laughter is as music to the ears. Today millions of men are denied the opportunity to provide homes, because of the uncertainty of employment. For every man so situated there is some woman denied the privilege of a home where she may blossom into motherhood.

The present regime whose basic function is the brutal exploitation of man by man has attained a state where everybody is for himself and the devil take the hindmost, but Christ meant this broad domain to be for the common good of all—and free.

That each might share the fruit of the toil—
The reward for his honest, tireless toil.

GEO. GERDES.

TWO NOTABLE PEACE STEPS.

There were two notable developments at the arms conference, yesterday, which count heavily for peace and good understanding between the nations.

After Premier Briand's masterly exposition of the situation and the mind of France with regard to disarmament Secretary Hughes practically pledged America's support of France against imperialistic aggression and in behalf of liberty and justice. Of course, it is not within the power of Mr. Hughes to pledge a defensive treaty or the actual use of American forces to defend France, but his statement with regard to the attitude of America towards the safety of France from aggression has great moral weight and is significant of the administration's policy. It might foreshadow decisive action to make a reduction of land forces possible, with security against attack.

Mr. Balfour spoke more emphatically of the purpose of Great Britain, having fought with France for justice and liberty against imperialism, to stand with her on that ground.

It becomes more and more evident as the conference goes on that the one thing necessary for that "moral disarmament" to which both Premier Briand and Mr. Balfour referred is a guarantee of sincerity against aggression. It is not love of war but fear of attack and conquest which keeps alive the martial flame and leads to armaments and war. The moment nations stand together for the protection of each other from aggression and for law and peaceful processes of settling disputes armaments will disappear and the will to peace of which Mr. Hughes spoke will have free play to accomplish its salutary ends. A covenant of peace among nations is the only sure foundation of world peace.

The other development was the pledge embodied in a resolution signed by the representatives of eight Powers—all except China—at the conference to "respect the sovereignty, independence and the territorial and administrative integrity of China," to give China full "opportunity to develop and maintain an effective and stable government" and to establish the principle of equal opportunity in China for the commerce and industry of all nations and to refrain from seeking "special rights or privileges which would abridge the rights of subjects or citizens of other states and from countenancing action inimical to the security of other states."

This is a sweeping resolution with regard to the attitude of other nations towards China and of tremendous value and significance. It lays the foundation for the satisfactory solution of the main Far Eastern question. While it applies only to the future its logical effect tends irresistibly to the relinquishment by other nations of territorial holdings, concessions and "spheres of influence" in China. The policy of exploiting China and embarrassing her internal end economic freedom is formally abandoned. The "open door" is reaffirmed, but the "open-door" policy was initiated to prevent discrimination by nations holding Chinese ports, railroads, territory and "spheres of influence." When these things are abandoned there will be no doors in China not controlled by the Chinese themselves.

Of course, the resolution does not at once solve the Chinese problems. The internal problem of stable and effective government must be worked out, but the principle of China for the Chinese and equal trade opportunity for all is a long step in the right direction.

The hopeful thing is that the conference is steadily making progress in the direction of the purposes for which it is called. The free exchange of views is helpful to a peaceful understanding, which makes for the moral disarmament which must be accomplished in order to realize the full benefits of physical disarmament.

BUREAUCRATIC STATISTICS.

The Department of Labor's statement that the average retail price of food has fallen 23 per cent since October of last year may be approximately correct, but the information that food prices in September showed a reduction of three-tenths of a percent may be accepted with reservation. Fractional exactitude is a nicety of accounting that is rather beyond the capacity of Government bureaus.

The fact is that bureau statistics are not reliable. St. Louis recently exposed a serious blunder by a Government agency in the matter of local unemployment. A few weeks earlier alarming reports from Washington as to starvation and the ravages of a pellagra epidemic in a number of Southern states proved to be gross exaggerations. Other instances of inaccuracy are on record. The point of it all is that Government bureaus, so far from being infallible, are operated by ordinary mortals who are prone to error.

The tendency of the times to commit affairs and duties to bureaus, to depend upon them for guidance, is a weak and foolish faith. Bureaucracy is the worst possible substitute for self-reliance.

AN IMPENDING BLOW.

While the arms conference makes encouraging progress in clearing up the menacing political condition of the world a more imperative summons impends in the economic and financial field. Aside from the prolonged misery which prevails over Europe on account of debased currency and lack of credit, there comes due on Jan. 15 a reparations installment of 500,000,000 gold marks from Germany which that Government, it is said, cannot possibly pay from resources now in sight.

The statement is made by the London Times that in the event of Germany's failure to pay "the difficulties to French finance may prove insuperable, and if France follows Germany into bankruptcy the crash may well bring down the whole edifice of European credit."

In this dilemma the Times calls upon America again to shoulder the burden of the world "by devising some scheme for financing the nations now hovering on the brink of insolvency."

The United States unquestionably would have a strong motive in coming to the rescue of European credit, but there is nothing new in the summons. American financiers, manufacturers and merchants have long recognized the seriousness of the European situation and the benefit which would accrue to all the world by its alleviation, but no practical solution has been attempted. America has the resources, but they are tied up in national indebtedness, while business is being taxed to the limit at which it can survive.

Why always fall back upon America to keep the world afloat, particularly when the European Governments themselves have not exhausted ways and means of pooling their resources to establish credit and restore the value of currency? The ter Meulen plan for providing war-crushed nations with credit was adopted by the Brussels International Conference a year ago and is still being agitated among financiers, apparently without result in actual accomplishment. Sir Drummond Fraser, head of the largest bank in England outside of London and organizer of the ter Meulen plan, came to America last month to expound the scheme to the American Bankers' Association, and incidentally gave an exposition before the St. Louis Commercial Club, which passed resolutions of approval.

Frank A. Vanderlip proposes, to the same end, a "bank of the United States and Europe," to be modeled on the Federal reserve system of the United States.

With these concrete suggestions on which to base a structure that would pool the credit resources of the world and establish a basis for the stabilization of currency and the restoration of normal production and trade, and with a new crisis in world finance looming less than two months away, it would appear that a world economic conference were even more urgent in point of time than a reduction of armaments congress.

The time is not too late. The very fact of the calling of such a conference might enable Germany to avert the crisis by a short-term loan.

The etymologists may not know it, but junk is the most active verb in all the languages on earth.

INTERNATIONALIZING ART.

A Japanese shipping magnate has been making a gigantic raid on the art galleries of Europe. In the past few years he has transferred about 1000 works of the masters, old and new, from the Occident to Island Empire and now proposes to found a gallery in Tokio at an expense of $5,000,000 for the benefit of the Japanese people.

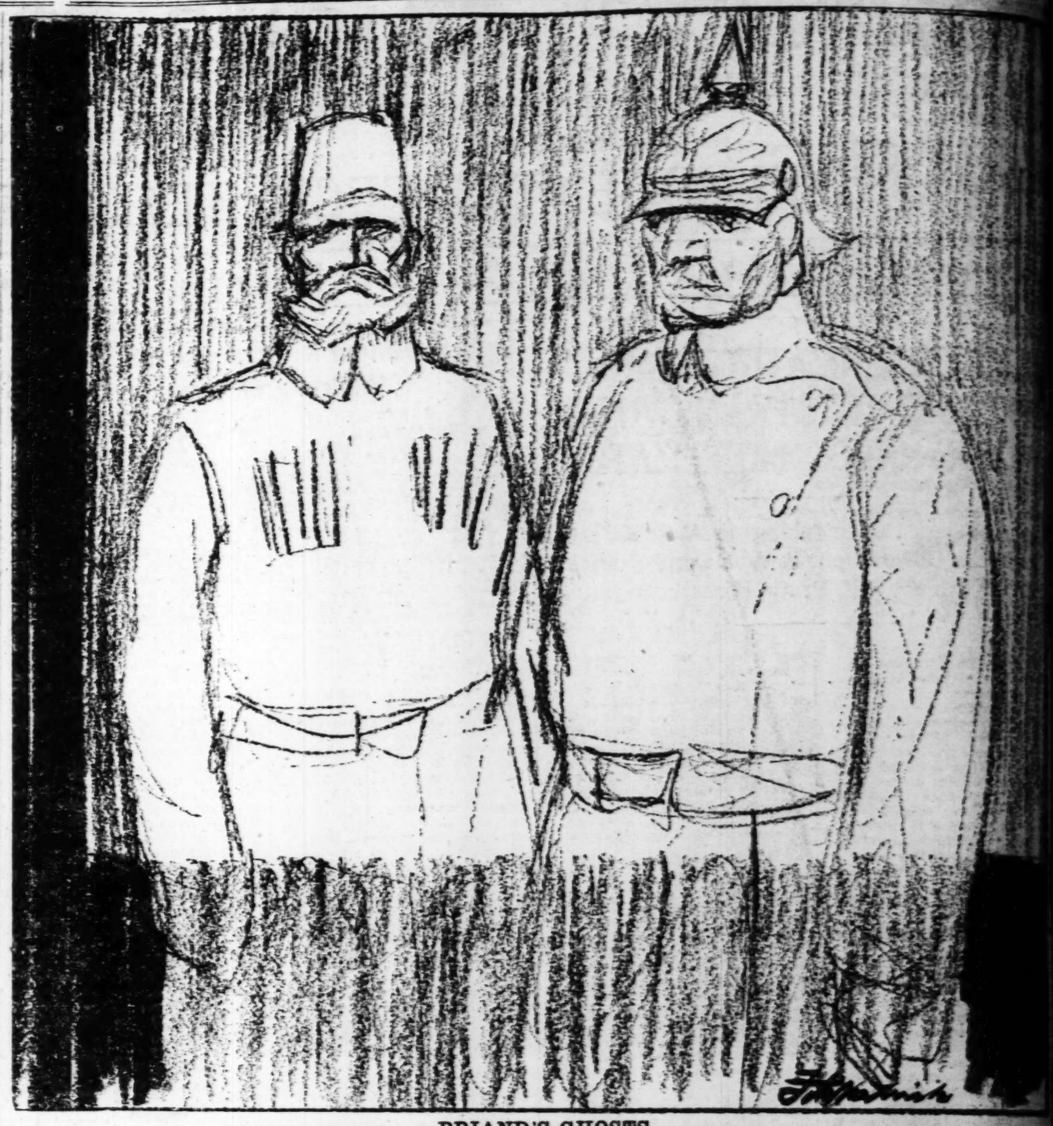

International dissemination of works of art is a service to peace as well as to culture. The common devotion of all European nations to such universal geniuses as Shakspeare, Goethe and Wagner failed to prevent the World War, but it was one of the things that induced a popular realization of the enormity and the futility of war. Through the literature, the music, the painting and sculpture of the great masters, the nationalities partake of common emotions and imbibe a common knowledge of one another as through no other medium.

The things of the heart, the love of beauty, are supernational. The emotion of world concord also is supernational. To educate the people in the appreciation of the universal artists and poets is to educate them to broader understanding, tolerance and the love of peace.

BRIAND'S GHOSTS.

JUST A MINUTE . . .

Written for the POST-DISTATCH
By Clark McAdams

JUST A MINUTE IN WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Almost no attention is paid at the disarmament conference to the great horde of experts brought here by the various delegations; but like as not, after having tired of the big political figures, people will be glad to make something of these other folk. Failure to do this proved to be one of the dreadful mistakes of the Versailles conference. The experts got mad and went home, many of them subsequently to write books clearly establishing the inexpertness of the treaty.

The Washington conference is not forgetful of that disaster. It has several liaison officers whose duty it is to keep the experts from going to bed too early and otherwise falling out of sight. An expert is proud, which makes it particularly difficult. Ethics of peace conferences forbid his personal appearance upon the floor as a speaker. He is even enjoined from making signs or in any way communicating what he knows from a gallery or box to the conference as a whole. He must remain unseen and unheard except by the members of the special committees in secret session.

This is hard upon experts, who are the product of the best universities and technical schools we have. They are accustomed to the homage almost everywhere paid to learning, and there is no greater surrender of pride at any peace or disarmament conference than theirs. Almost every one of our experts came home from Paris fairly beside himself. Nothing whatever was made of them either by the people who took them there or the people of Paris. Some of them were not even called on. True, they enjoyed the hospitality of their expert kind in France; but so far as the reading public knew they were not a part of the conference at all. Many of them really were not. They became merely onlookers. One of the British experts, Mr. Keyne, wrote a book after the conference which is credited with having contributed more to the economic undoing of the Versailles treaty than any other single factor. He was expertly mad.

Some of us have pointed out this peril in the present instance, suggesting a parade of experts or some similar means of getting them before the people as a veritable part of the conference itself. The delegates go out of their way to mention them and always respectfully. If the press asks Mr. Balfour something, he almost invariably answers that it is a matter for the experts. Lord Lee of Fareham, First Lord of the Admiralty, is even more careful to give the impression that only the experts are competent to solve the grave questions involved in the American proposal. Oftentimes we pressed him for an opinion, but he never presumed upon what only experts know. We first thought these statesmen were making a convenient use of experts, but we became convinced at length that theirs is really studied deference to those who might otherwise leave.

Statesmen themselves have only a very general knowledge of anything. Let us take, for instance, the moot question whether the Japanese really need expansion. There are 375 Japanese to the square mile as against 1072 people to the square mile in England. Those comparative figures mean nothing to a mere statesman. How, indeed, may we get at it truly and fairly except by appealing to experts? Let us therefore call in an expert on the relative productiveness of a square mile in Japan. We learn from him that much of Japan is mountainous. Perhaps that equation alone equalizes the density of population in England and Japan. Be that as it may, what we are trying to get at is Japan's need of expansion. We call an expert on fishing. What is the comparative productiveness in sea food of the English and Japanese coasts? Is the Japanese a better fisherman than the Briton? Does he catch bigger fish? Are the fish he does catch equal in nutriment to the fish caught by the Briton? This man knows something. He is an expert. If he got mad and went home, as he did at Paris, we should simply have to call another conference. That is what we have done. Presently, if we have tact, there will be a great to-do about experts. They shall be hailed and acclaimed.

It is a great relief to everybody to learn that our great captains of industry think they can worry along somehow without making armament. We have this assurance from Judge Gary, and we have it flatly from Mr. Schwab. The Japanese have feared opposition from a similar quarter in Japan. They have not heard whether the same renunciation is to be possible there. A cheering note was sounded by one of our big shipbuilding concerns. It has learned that it can repair box cars. It is already repairing them. Probably that exquisiteness in skill which we are told is imperiled by the abandonment of capital ship construction may be turned into the making of violins. We had never guessed until we heard this side of the story how the technique of armament making has been perfected. The British particularly are alarmed about this. They say it means the passing of a very great art. They set out to save it, which accounted for the suggested counter proposal that they be permitted to build one battleship a year. Then they heard from home.

The British, by the way, have had a grievous experience here in Washington. It seems their habit in England to wear woolen underwear at this season. They wore this underwear over here. When they entered our steam-heated buildings, which are insufferably hot to Britons, they began to itch. It is always easy to identify any of these Britons in Washington building. He is the man scratching himself.

All the correspondents would like to know what it was Baron Katp said to the Japanese writers the other day. They were to get up a round robin protesting against counter proposals by the Japanese Government. About that time the Baron sent for them all. I was at the Japanese embassy when they answered this summons. No such round robin was issued. It is understood that the Baron told them the Japanese Government would decide the policy of Japan without direction from the press. That could not have been all he told them.

They have a curious custom as to the press in Japan, so I am told. Every newspaper has a jail editor whose part it is to serve sentences for infractions of the Government censorship. This unhappy individual looks out from vicarious sacrifice upon this changing world, the very symbol of Oriental protest against remaining always Oriental. At that, the Japanese press is the liveliest exhibit Japan has at the conference. The Occidental correspondent is merely a newsgatherer. He is not a political factor except as the news he purveys affects politics. The Japanese correspondent has an opinion, and to that extent is a politician. This amuses the Occidental journalist, and no other feature of the conference has entertained him so much as the open practice of Oriental journalism here in our midst.

Evidently the newspaper-writing corps of Japan is a very liberal force over there. It has been educated almost entirely in the United States and England, and it has taken home with it much of our Western point of view. Its influence here is perhaps solidly thrown to the support of the American proposal. Japan is about ripe for democratic government. The Washington conference could easily precipitate it. The elder statesmen who rule that country are doing precisely what the first Japanese I ever saw was doing.

He was walking a tightwire.

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

This column is designed to reproduce without bias the latest comment by the leading publications, newspapers and periodicals on the questions of the day.

PANAMA CANAL TOLLS.

From the Decatur (Ill.) Herald.

SLEEPY men sitting in a hotel bedroom more than select candidates for President they make the laws of the land. The New York Times claims to have the real reason why the Panama Canal tolls plank happened to be in the Republican platform. While the subcommittee of the Platform Committee was puzzling over a declaration on the League of Nations in the Chicago convention that would keep the "irreconcilables" in line, Senator Borah appeared with a demand that the party pledge itself to remove tolls for American vessels. Anxious to get the question out of the way, the committee took a hurried vote, preceded by no debate, and a resolution that had been discussed in Congress for months and had been the subject of diplomatic exchanges was perfunctorily settled amid yawns. The pledge was kept in the Senate vote two years ago, but 17 Republicans refused to be held by the pledge so hastily and informally given. It remains to be seen whether the House will follow the Senate's example, and if so whether President Harding is prepared to scrap national honor because a few tired committeemen were too sleepy to consider the consequences of the cant they had put in the party plank.

HOME WOMEN IN PUBLIC LIFE.

From the Brockton (Mass.) Times.

THE leading daily paper in one of the New England cities has been conducting a series of interviews with prominent women concerning their home lives and the circumstances surrounding their marriages. Every woman interviewed so far is happily married and has been for years the mistress of the best type of American home. These are women who would not ordinarily give any publicity to their personal affairs. They do it now for the sake of lesson and example. The simple love chronicle as it appears in wholesome heartwarming and far removed from the sordid. Such stories offer a pleasing contrast to the modern type of sensuous fiction which young people devour daily in books or see depicted on the screen. They help to prove that public life and service do not interfere with competent home management or happy home life. They show that divorce is not necessary to individual development or the broadening of interest which is needed to keep life free from monotony. The more power to women who let their stories of life's clean joys be published the better.

CO-OPERATIVE BANKS.

GERTRUDE MATHEWS SHELBY in the Century.

ONLY 12 states authorize co-operative banks although several more, among them Missouri, are acting on bills. Federal legislation is opposed. Henry W. Wolff, the international authority on people's banks, deplores the American requirement that every depositor must hold stock. Freedom to accept deposits from all comers and accounts for the fact that in Europe such banks have grown into a mighty system, with several billions of assets. While legislation encouraging financial democracy, the dynamite of economic power, why not extend credit to the powers to accept deposits? Our safeguards through inspection are certainly stiff enough to warrant that leeway. Co-operation rests entirely upon a permeating voluntarism. It points the ways of peace. The transformation which the world is already realizing through the extension of co-operative banks is not due to change. It is the gradual conversion of community after another to the belief that benefit is the ultimate individual benefit, the substitution of a remarkably direct motive for one which, in its deification of profit, has looked necessary services.

The accompaniments ged with dissonances, used the sake of description and ulation; the partitions be- the keys are broken down, and harmonies suddenly enter without modulation, for the purpose of color.

Genuine Lieder Writer.

Despite the subtler, keener, richer vernacular placed at his disposal by modern music—a music which he himself has had no small part in developing—it proved that Dr. Strauss belongs to the genuine line of German minnesinger. He is a writer of lieder as truly as Schubert and Franz, if by the lied we mean a small song exquisitely worked out in every detail, and devoted to the fervent expression of feeling.

For the sake of the record, the list of songs presented may be repeated. They were "Zueignung," "Jung-Hexenlied," "Traum Durch die Daemmerung," "Wiegenlied," "Ich Wollt' Ein Straeusslein Binden," "Einerlei," "Der Stern" "Schlechtes Wetter"—which was encored; "Ich Trage Meine Minne," "Schlagende Herzen," "Freundliche Vision," "Staendchen" and "Morgen," this being also an extra.

A tribute must be paid to the lovely art of Miss Schumann, who created the role of Sophie in Strauss' "Rosenkavalier," at Hamburg and at the Metropolitan in New York. Her scale of dynamics is delicate and fastidious; her pianissimo is so exquisitely soft that she has no need to scream in order to get the effect of a forte; her ear is so fine that she threads with complete certainty the maze of bewildering intonations required by the Strauss songs, which also demand musicianship of no mean order.

She has the gift of elocution which never steps outside song; and a voice of true sweetness, though apparently not resonant. Her great attraction is an ardent and melting power of interpretation.

The chief popular success of the program was the violin sonata. Contrary to general understanding, this is not a school-boy exercise, but a work of comparatively recent years. Its movements are entitled Allegro non troppo, Improvisation, and Allegro moderato. Brilliantly performed by Piastro, a violinist from Russia, it proved, so far as a first hearing may reveal, an opus filled with ideas and with rhythmical originality. Nevertheless, as it is almost altogether in the classic manner, noe may wonder whether the composer does not at present regard it with a certain indulgence.

Dr. Strauss Says Mozart Is His Favorite Composer.

A Post-Dispatch reporter who sought an interview with Dr. Richard Strauss was informed that, like the late Enrico Caruso, the German composer is averse to being interviewed personally. However, he has expressed some of his views to a traveling companion, who is authorized to speak for him. Here are some of the latter's revelations:

The favorite composer of Dr. Strauss is Mozart. He is accustomed to say: "Beethoven was the greatest, but Mozart was the best." He would scarcely name his favorite work among the compositions of Mozart, but has been heard to speak often and admiringly of "The Magic Flute."

Among his own orchestral works, Dr. Strauss likes best the "Domestic Symphony." His favorite among his songs is "Traum Durch die Daemmerung." He has not yet decided which of his operas he prefers, but seems to have a great liking for "Ariadne auf Naxos."

No Opinion on "Jazz."

He has been quoted as expressing an admiration for "jazz," but incorrectly. He has heard a fragment or so of ragtime in Germany, but does not consider he has heard enough of it to form an opinion.

He finds that, among audiences here, musical appreciation is as intense as it is in Europe. He believes that American audiences are musically well educated and discriminating.

The thing that has most impressed Dr. Strauss in the United States is the tremendous architectural development of New York since his visit there 17 years ago. He means skyscrapers with plain lines, not masses of stone confectionery like the Woolworth Building.

His favorite German writer is Goethe, and he is engaged at present in rereading for the twentieth time "Wilhelm Meister's Apprenticeship." His favorite French author is Stendhal. He has a great admiration for Nietzsche, and made a musical setting of that philosopher's "Thus Spake Zarathustra."

Opinion of Ultra-Modern Composers.

He does not believe greatly in the ultra-modern composers who have in recent years passed far beyond his own modernism. They have contributed much that is new, he says, especially in rhythm; but he is not convinced that their works will live.

He regards with horror acts of desecration such as taking Schubert's songs and making them into a musical show, as has been done in New York.

Dr. Strauss was invited to rehearse the Symphony Orchestra in his symphonic poem, "Till Eulenspiegel," which is to be played Friday and Saturday. The composer declined with regret, as he had to take an early morning train for Kansas City.

MAN REPORTS HIS AUTO FIRED ON; DETECTIVES SHOT AT ONE

Alfred Rispler of 3936 Connecticut street reported to the police last night that at 10:35 o'clock he was driving his automobile west on Lindell boulevard, near Spring avenue, when two men stepped out from the sidewalk, one with something "shiny" in his hand. He said he thought they were robbers and "stepped on the gas," whereupon there was a shot fired, which caused him to "step" harder. Five other shots were fired, he said. Passengers in his automobile were his wife and two other women.

Detectives Doherty and Shelton reported that about 10:30 p. m., while they were on their way into the West End to search, upon instruction for suspicious-looking automobiles, an automobile occupied by four men, slowed down and moved toward the curb on Lindell boulevard, near Spring avenue, and that a man alighted from the automobile and moved toward them. The man, upon perceiving them more clearly, they said, got back into the automobile, which was driven rapidly west in Lindell. Shelton reported that he fired one shot and then five more into the air.

Thanksgiving Day

—it's almost here—the biggest feast-day of the year—the day of all days for those who like good things to eat. And what an appetizing array of wonderfully good things we've prepared for your Thanksgiving table! For instance:

Special! 3-lb. Box of Candy..$2

Mince Pies 40c
Big, thick, juicy pies, just bursting with goodness. Your turkey dinner won't be complete without one. And they cost only 40c.

Charlotte Russe, 6 for.....50c
A favorite confection! Naturally, you'll want a half-dozen or even a dozen for Thanksgiving. These are fine as any you ever tasted. We're particularly proud of them.

Thanksgiving Fruitcake, lb. 75c
Just crowded full with fruit and nuts. We baked these fruit cakes weeks ago, and they've mellowed now to the Nth degree of deliciousness. Any size you want—from 2 to 25-lbs.

Fancy Tea Cakes, lb.....75c
Packed in fancy boxes, a selection of many different kinds in each box; and every kind so good you won't know which to choose first. Special, a pound for 75 cents.

Layer Cakes
65c to $1.50

The man in a hurry can save time here.
He will probably be in more of a hurry than ever the day before Thanksgiving. But a minute's time is all he needs, for we have the candy he wants — in one, two and three pound boxes, all wrapped and ready to take away—a dozen different assortments — 40c to $1.25 a pound. Your Thanksgiving hostess will appreciate a box.

AUTO MUST HAVE SIGNALS AFTER TODAY

Arrests of Owners Will Be Begun Tomorrow if Closed Cars Not Equipped.

Arrests of owners of closed automobiles which are not equipped with rear-end signal devices will be begun by the police tomorrow.

Chief O'Brien said that his order, issued today, was the result of a telephone communication last night from Prosecuting Attorney Oakley, who stated that the enforcement of the law on signaling devices was the duty of the Prosecuting Attorney and he thought it was "about time" for arrests to begin.

Chief O'Brien said that the police would not attempt to pass on what constituted a legal signaling device and would arrest only those owners who displayed no device whatever. Nor, he said, would the police rule on what constituted a closed car, except that cars with all the curtains in place would be considered closed in beginning the arrests.

Some Closed Cars Excepted.

Prosecuting Attorney Oakley said today that he construed the law as requiring no signal device on a closed car in which the window adjacent to the steering wheel was kept open, permitting free arm signaling. This held good, he said, on curtained cars, where no curtain next to the driver was in place.

In a communication to the police, Oakley wrote that the cars which come within the meaning of the law and which must be equipped with signaling devices are:

A—All closed cars, including sedans, cabriolets, coupes and broughams.

B—All cars that by reason of curtains being in position become closed cars.

C—All trucks so constructed that the hand and arm signals cannot be given so as to be plainly visible from the rear, or that by reason of their cab curtains being in position become closed cars.

List of 22 Devices Submitted.

Oakley has submitted a list of 22 devices as being within the law. However, the Secretary of State, who has 30 days from the date on which the law became effective in which to certify devices, has not yet given out his list.

The State law requiring rear-end signal devices became effective Nov. 2. The police first set Nov. 14 as the day on which they would begin arrests. However, prior to that date so much discussion arose as to what constituted compliance with the law that Chief O'Brien requested a ruling of Attorney-General Barrett. No reply coming before Nov. 14, arrests were not begun on that date, and none have been made since, no opinion from the Attorney-General having been received.

POLICE INVESTIGATING CAUSE OF FIRE AT ADAMS SCHOOL

Blazes Also Reported in Coffee House and Clothing Store—Damage in Each About $1000.

Policemen are investigating the cause of a fire discovered in the basement of the kindergarten of the Adams School, 4335 Vista avenue at 11:55 o'clock last night by William Markensen, of 4334 Vista avenue.

Assistant Fire Chief Dunsford, who was one of the first to arrive at the school told the police he found the fire in two places in the basement and believed an attempt had been made to burn the building, a two story brick structure. The damage was estimated at $500.

Automatic sprinklers summoned the fire department to the C. F. Blanke Tea and Coffee Co., 216-22 South Seventh street, at 2 a. m. today. The fire had started, the police reported, on a shelf where stock was stored on the fourth floor. The damage was estimated at $1025.

Fire discovered at 5:30 p. m. yesterday on the second floor of the 5-story brick building at 1105 Washington avenue occupied by the Morris Rubin Clothing Co. caused damage estimated at $1000 to the stock of the Rubin Company. The stock of the Goodyear Rubber Co. on the first floor was damaged by water. The cause of the fire was not ascertained.

MAN ENDS LIFE BY TURNING ON GAS IN BATHROOM OF HOME

Herbert Schroeder, 38 years old, ended his life yesterday afternoon by locking himself in the bathroom at his home, 3722 Wyoming avenue, and turning on the gas jets of the chandelier and lying down on the floor with a towel for a pillow, to be asphyxiated.

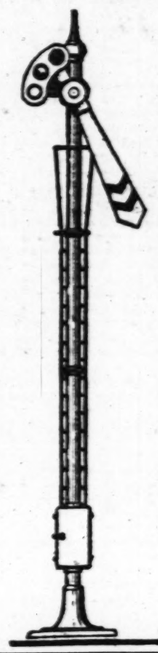

Schroeder, who was a former superintendent for the Laclede Gas Co., suffered a nervous breakdown some time ago and was placed in St. Vincent's asylum. He was released Friday. Yesterday evening he and his wife and two children were to have taken dinner with the family of Albert Vohlkamp, 3238 Copelin avenue. Mrs. Schroeder and the children preceded him to the Vohlkamp home. When Schroeder did not appear, Vohlkamp went to his home and found the doors locked and detected an odor of gas. He called Police Lieut. Hussey, who lives upstairs, and Hussey broke in. Schroeder was found dead.

St. Louis Gives $17,760 for Stadium.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Nov. 22.—Ninety-five pledges for $17,760 have been made in St. Louis toward the University of Illinois memorial stadium, it has been announced by W. Elmer Ekblaw, director of the campaign. A million and a half dollars have been raised. Cook County, including Chicago, leads with a total subscribed of $235,000.

The Block Signals Are Working—

In some respects, human experience is like railroading.

Every moment of the business and social day the block signals are giving right of way to keenness and alertness—while the slow and the heavy must wait on the sidetrack for their chance to move forward.

The ability to "go through" and to "get there" depends much on the poise of body, brain and nerves that comes with correct diet and proper nourishment.

That's why so many choose Grape-Nuts for breakfast and lunch. Served with cream or milk it is completely nourishing, partly pre-digested, and it supplies the vital mineral salts so necessary to full nutrition.

Grape-Nuts has a rich, delightful flavor, is ready to serve on the instant—and is distinctly the food for mental and physical alertness and speed. At all grocers.

THE annoying thing about Halitosis (unpleasant breath), whether it be temporary or chronic, is the fact that a person so afflicted is usually not conscious of it himself.
And even your best friends will hesitate a long time before telling you about it.
If you suspect that Halitosis may be chronic with you, better consult a physician.
But if it's only temporary—as is so often the case—then a good mouth wash of Listerine used regularly and generously will give you relief.
It's a comfortable feeling to be on the safe side.

NILSSON, OPERA SINGER, DIES IN COPENHAGEN

"Swedish Nightingale" Who Visited St. Louis in 1873 Expires at Age of 78.

By the Associated Press.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 22.—Christine Nilsson, the noted operatic soprano, died here this morning.

She was 78 years old and bore the title of Countess of Miranda through marriage with a Spanish nobleman.

Christine Nilsson was born in 1843, near Wevio, Sweden. Her father was a peasant, and Christine first saw daylight from the windows of a hut. But her father was a musician and leader of the choir of the parish church and skilled with the violin. He taught his son and daughter to play this instrument, and at a very early age the boy, Carl, and Christine sang at village fairs and at weddings in the vicinity of their home. For this they received stray pennies.

She later went to Paris, where Wartel gave her a three-years' course of preparation, and in October, 1864, she made her debut at the Theater Lyrique, Paris, in Verdi's "Traviata." She was a success, and she subsequently appeared in "Don Giovanni" and in "The Magic Flute."

Her first appearance in London was in 1867, in "Traviata." She next appeared in the principal capitals of Europe.

Her first husband, Auguste Rouzand, died in 1882.

She formed an attachment for the young Spanish girl, Senorita de Miranda, and married the father, "rather than be separated from his child," her friends have always said. She lived in Paris for years.

Christine Nilsson made two journeys to the United States, each of which was a triumph from her coming to her departure. New York was even more cordial and enthusiastic in its greetings than London, Paris, St. Petersburg, Vienna, Berlin and Madrid. She was fairly idolized by music lovers. As she drove through the streets flowers were thrown at her.

Her first appearance in New York was at the Academy of Music, one winter night in 1873. She sang the role of Elsa in "Lohengrin," and scored an instantaneous success. The older generation will recall the wild demonstration with which her appearance before the curtain, in response to plaudits, occasioned. The audience seemed mad, and Mlle. Nilsson, frail and fairy-like, and used to the applause of Europe, seemed frightened at the reception. From that night on she was the most talked of woman in America.

She was taken ill in 1901 and her life was then despaired of, but she recovered after a long illness.

Mme. Nilsson visited St. Louis on each of her trips to the United States, appearing first at the theater that is now the Grand Opera House, and later at the old Olympic Theater. Her mother accompanied her on both trips.

FOUR TOP NOTCH ACTS ON ORPHEUM PROGRAM

Ona Munson, Toto, Jimmie Barry and Olsen and Johnson Provide a Sequence of Rare and Mirthful Entertainment.

On this week's Orpheum bill are four acts any one of which would be worthy of headline honors. They are Toto, the famous clown; Mr. and Mrs. Jimmie Barry; Ona Munson and her "manly review," and those inimitable Scandinavians, Ole Olsen and Chic Johnson. These turns come in sequence and leave the audience so surfeited with good things that the much-heralded Four Marx Brothers come as an anticlimax of shoddy pertness, vulgarity and mediocrity in comparison with what has gone before.

Ona Munson is a living argument for perpetuation of the short-skirt style. She has youth, beauty and dash in full and well-rounded measure. She has sourrounded herself with a sextet of most presentable young men who can sing and dance. Her act is beautifully staged.

Toto is funny as ever with his shiny red pate, his baggy trousers, his cute little dog and a new bag of tricks. He has added a Salome burlesque, the acrobatics of which in a measure offset its questionable taste.

The "Zeke Wilkins" impersonation of Jimmie Barry has come to be a classic. Here is an actor of the old school with years of intensive training to make every gesture and every vocal quaver and shade of facial expression significant.

Olsen and Johnson are one of the best of the singer and pianist teams on the circuit. Their act at yesterday's opening was further enlivened by the comical "butting-in" of Toto and his dog.

REFORMATORY INQUIRY OPENS

Investigation Into Conduct of Boonville Institution Begun.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Nov. 22.—Arthur T. Nelson, Director of Penal Institutions, and Al. G. Blakey, one of the commissioners of penal institutions, departed last night for Boonville to be present today at the opening session of an inquiry which the State Board of Charities and Corrections will conduct into the affairs of the State reformatory there. Blakey was superintendent of the reformatory for four years.

It is understood that Gov. Hyde has advised the Board of Charities and Corrections to invite Circuit Attorney Howard Sidener of St. Louis to be present at the hearings, as complaint by Sidener that one of the inmates is being allowed to live in Boonville with his family, instead of being held within the institution, is one of the reasons for the inquiry.

KIDNAPING OF BOYS REMAINS MYSTERY

Police Suspect Others Interested May Be Withholding Knowledge From Authorities.

Investigation by the police has led to no indication of the whereabouts of Dominick Di Franco, 7-year-old son of Constantino Di Franco of 5256 Wilson avenue, kidnaped on the way to school, Nov. 14, and of Vincent Castelli, 5-year-old son of Vito Castelli of 4551 Laclede avenue, who was similarly kidnaped while going home from school last Thursday. Two men in a Ford car figured in each abduction.

While the police have found no clew, they suspect that others interested have information which is being withheld from the authorities, and that possibly negotiations for the return of the boys are under way.

The fathers of both boys have made daily denials to detectives and reporters that any demands have been made on them for ransom.

The only assertion as to a ransom demand was made about a week ago to a Post-Dispatch reporter by the Rev. Father Luciano Carrotti, pastor of St. Ambrosius' Church, who said he had heard that a demand had been made on Di Franco for $3500 ransom and that Di Franco had refused to pay the money. Di Franco at the time denied this was true. Since then Father Carrotti has told detectives his information was "only hearsay."

When shown a story in an afternoon newspaper today under the head line: "Kidnapers Demand Ransom of $25,000 for Di Franco Boy," Di Franco said there was no truth in it and reiterated that no overtures had been made to him by the kidnapers. He also denied an assertion in the same paper that he was out on a mysterious errand last night and that his wealth was rated at $160,000 to $200,000, said by the paper to be the estimate of "close friends."

AMERICAN CONSULS NOW ON DUTY AGAIN IN GERMANY

German Foreign Office Expected to Give Official Recognition of 13 in Few Days.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Nov. 22.—The shields of the American Consular offices in Germany were set up outside the buildings yesterday for the first time since relations were broken off between Germany and the United States. The Consuls are now ready to carry on official business.

The German Government was requested to recognize 13 Consuls provisionally, all of whom have taken up their duties.

The following Consulates have reopened: Berlin, Munich, Hamburg, Frankfort-on-the-Main, Dresden, Leipzig, Stuttgart, Bremen, Coblenz, Cologne, Stettin, Breslau and Koenigsberg.

The transition of the former American mission into a full-fledged embassy was accomplished without ceremony, Ellis Loring Dresel now being Charge d'Affaires.

By the Associated Press.

VIENNA, Nov. 22.—The final step in the resumption of diplomatic relations between Austria and the United States was taken yesterday, when the Chancellor received Arthur Hugh Frazier in the capacity of Charge d'Affaires. Frazier formerly held the post of American Commissioner in Vienna.

FOUR AMERICANS HELD BY MEXICAN BANDITS FOUR HOURS

Party Released Near Chihuahua When Ransom Demanded Is Not Forthcoming.

By the Associated Press.

After held for ransom, the party was released at the end of a four-hour period when no ransom was forthcoming.

TWO MEN KILLED IN DUEL

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Nov. 22.—In shotgun and pistol duel at Prestonburg, Ky., last evening A. J. Clark, Floyd County Deputy Sheriff, and H. B. Conway, superintendent of the Elkhorn Coal Corporation mines at Garrett, shot each other to death. The tragedy occurred in front of the postoffice and was witnessed by a score of persons. The men had hot words earlier in the day and later Conway, armed with a shotgun and pistol, met Clark in front of the postoffice and with the ejaculation, "I've got you now," opened fire with a shotgun, wounding Clark in the right shoulder. Clark drew his own pistol and both men continued to shoot until they fell mortally wounded. Conway was arrested by Clark, then Marshal of Garrett, some time ago, on a charge of disorderly conduct. Clark is survived by a widow and children. Conway leaves a

BUSH AND GOULDS NAMED IN D. & R. G. SUIT

Stockholders, Who Ask for $200,000,000, Charge Sale of Road Was Result of Conspiracy.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—Suit for the recovery of $200,000,000, which is alleged to be the amount of loss suffered by the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad as a result of an unlawful combination and conspiracy on the part of men who served on the directorate of the railroad during the past 10 years, has been started in the Supreme Court.

This action is the climax to the efforts that stockholders have been making over a period of nine years towards having the finances of the company thoroughly investigated.

The men named as conspirators in the complaint, which was made by a committee of stockholders, are George J. Gould, Edward T. Jeffery, Arthur Coppell, Edwin Gould, Kingdon Gould, Edgar L. Marston, Benjamin F. Bush, Edward L. Brown, Edward D. Adams, Finley J. Shepard, Harrison Williams, Benjamin McAlpin, George G. Haven, Henry U. Mudge, James Horace Harding, Harry Bronner, Charles C. Huitt, John H. McClement, Alvin W. Krech and Alexander R. Baldwin. The Denver & Rio Grande Railroad Co. also is name das defendant.

Committee Formed in 1920.

In 1920 the Stockholders' Protective Committee was organized and the suit is the result of its efforts. Among the members of the committee are George T. Rogers, Joseph J. Slocum, James Nelson and Benjamin H. Old.

In its complain the stockholders' committee asserts that for many years the D. & R. G. Railroad carried on a prosperous business and in the 10 years from 1900 to 1910 paid preferred dividends in full. The complaint alleges that in 1915 the defendants entered into a conspiracy to wreck the D. & R. G. and to cause all its properties to be absorbed and wiped out by adverse interests.

As the first step in this direction, the complaint says, the alleged conspirators, directors of both the Missouri Pacific and the Denver & Rio Grande caused the latter to default a mortgage interest payment to the Western Pacific. Although the road had ample cash resources to meet the same. By this action and succeeding ones the directors caused foreclosure proceedings to be instituted against the Rio Grande, it adds.

In one protest sent to the directors the stockholders' committee wrote:

"During the past few months the directors and officers of the Denver & Rio Grande have been mute and immovable while a deathblow was being dealt the company. They have supinely allowed properties of tremendous value, doubtless worth $80,000,000, to be sold for the absurd price of $5,000,000 under a defective and unintelligible notice of sale, whereby assets worth millions of dollars were not revealed."

Stock Dropped From Exchange.

The stock of the railroad was stricken from the New York Stock Exchange last August. Shortly before this the stock was selling at less than $1 a share. The stock was removed from the exchange after notice was received from the secretary of the road that the property had been transferred to the Western Pacific.

The complainants ask that the defendants be required to make restitution for all moneys that have been wrongfully divested and for all losses that the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad and its stockholders have incurred.

POLICE ITEMS

DR. HENRY C. KLOEPFER OF 929 King's Highway Park has asked the police to help him recover an instrument case containing surgical instruments and an instrument for testing blood pressure, which disappeared from his automobile while he was bowling at the Holy Cross Church Hall, 3630 Ohio avenue, last night. A year ago, he said, practical jokers took the case and hid it for a few days.

A RUSTY REVOLVER, WRAPPED IN a towel, was found back of the coal in the rear of City Courtroom No. 1 in the Municipal Courts building by Sergt. Schanberkoetter yesterday afternoon. A negro had told the Sergeant it was there. The negro said he had visited a friend at the Workhouse recently and the friend had told of being confined in the cage and of seeing the package.

TWO STILLS AND A PART OF A third, still covered with lumber, 53 gallons and 21 quart bottles of liquor, supposed to be whisky, and a quantity of empty pint and half-pint bottles were found at 1027 North Ninth street by policemen who searched the premises last night. Two Italians were arrested. They said the basement in which the articles had been found had been rented to others.

BURGLARS IN THE HOME OF DR. M. J. Pullman, 3808 Cleveland avenue, in the absence of the family last night, stole jewelry and clothing valued at $450. At the home of Charles Hewitt, 1721 Lowerfellow boulevard, burglars took a tin box containing $150 in Liberty Bonds, $60 in War Savings Stamps and a $5 and $2.50 gold piece.

SALOON MAN HELD AFTER PISTOL INCIDENT

Probationary Policeman Refuses to Comply With "Drink on Premises" Order.

Police Sergeant Roach was out last night looking for liquor violations and about 9:30 o'clock sent Probationary Policeman Herbert Miller into John Schmidt's saloon, 401 South Broadway, to see if he could buy some whisky. Miller bought a drink of supposed whisky for 25 cents and paid for it with a marked dollar bill.

Instead of drinking it, Miller started out of the saloon with it to show Roach what he had bought. That did not suit Schmidt. He is alleged to have produced a revolver and informed Miller that drinks were supposed to be consumed on the premises and not carried around the neighborhood. Miller ran out, anyway. Edward Smith, the bartender, followed him. Roach went to Miller's rescue and arrested Schmidt and Smith.

Behind the bar they found a jug of what appeared be whisky and a revolver. In a back room was another revolver.

The home of Edward Belke, a paper hanger, at 1919 Franklin avenue, was searched at 11 p. m. by Acting Night Chief Matthews, who found eight pint bottles of what appeared to be whisky in a locker above a door. Belke said he had no idea how it got there. He was arrested.

The home of Frank Fitzgerald, 3902 North Eleventh street, was raided at 6 p. m. Fitzgerald was not there, but his wife, Clara, was. In the icebox was a quart and a pint of liquor. Following a line of hose which was attached to a water faucet, officers found that it led to the third floor, where they found a still, 10 gallons of alcohol and 10 gallons of whisky and 500 pounds of sugar. Mrs. Fitzgerald was arrested. When Fitzgerald came home he, too, was arrested. Both said they knew nothing about the still.

Bruns-Wicked Ballads

Will Santa Claus hear
The wish of your daughter Carlisle,
For that gift not inane
To help entertain
Her friends who drop in for awhile?

A Brunswick's the thing
To play when they sing,
Or take up the rugs for a dance.
The tone is so good,
'Cause the horn's of wood
And Isham Jones' music's immense.

Hoppe Facing His Last and Hardest Cue Test Tonight

HAS LOST ONE MATCH

Despite Two Indifferent Performances, "Willie" Is Still Unbeaten.

By Charles C. Peterson.
St. Louis Balkline Expert and Billiard Referee.

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—Willie Hoppe, champion for 15 years, unbeaten in the present tournament, still faces the hardest test of his career, tonight, when he plays younk Jake Schaefer in the deciding match of the international balkline billiard championship at the Congress Hotel.

Although Hoppe has won five games and lost none, while Schaefer suffered one defeat—at the hands of the French youth, Roger Conti—Willie has been outdone by the Chicagoan both in high run, high average and grand average. The saving grace of Hoppe's performances has been that in each match except last night's event he has come from behind and won despite an inferior start. Long leads have been gained against him, but still he comes through with whatever is needed to win.

That is the reason why, although Young Jake's figures are better than the champion's, Hoppe is a strong favorite to win the match this evening.

If Hoppe wins, he retains his title and is subject to challenge by the tournament field in the order of their finish, two matches to be played not later than June. If Hoppe loses tonight's game, the tourney will be tied and 500 points will have to be played to decide the issue.

Hoppe Again "Comes Back."

Hoppe won his way to the final last night by defeating Welker Cochran, a dangerous contender, holder of the world's record run of 384, by a score of 400 to 329. During the afternoon sessions Edouard Horemans, the European champion, won from G. Butler Sutton, 400 to 173, and Jake Schaefer downed Ora Morningstar, 400 to 300. Both afternoon games went six innings.

Hoppe last night was pitted against a billiard player who is dangerous at any stage of the game. His present billiards is as day to night, compared to the showing made in the last tournament at the Astor, New York. Cochran won the bank and missed, attempting a three-cushion break shot after some maneuvering.

Hoppe gave the packed house a taste of brilliant billiards. Having the ivories rolling perfectly he garnered a run of 76 and fell down on a miscue. Cochran appeared a little over-anxious and missed on a one-cushion try. Hoppe, on his next turn, clicked off 81, but a kiss-off on the side rail sent him back to his seat.

In the third inning Cochran broke the ice by picking up six buttons then failing on a spread draw. Willie started his half with a wide carom, a bank and a three-cushion shot. He gathered them at the lower left side of the table and put together 15 in a hurry; continuing, his thirty-eighth was a long spread draw. He stopped at 52 when he failed to count on a one-cushion shot.

Cochran started with a draw; his fourth was a four-cushion shot. He then made a left-handed draw for position. His fifteenth barely went out of balk. He missed a draw on his twenty-third and then gave a dazzling exhibition of line nursing. His seventieth point was a daring masse on the rail. Eighty-one and 82 were long direct draws. He went back to his corner after missing on a cushion shot.

Cochran Takes the Lead.

Hoppe slapped out a hard, one-cushion shot. Welker again took his turn and bunched 39 good and bad billiards, while Willie, in his half, missed an end rail bank shot leaving the balls on the right-hand lower corner.

The boy from Iowa made 10 lightning points. His eleventh was a one-cushion swing draw. He followed with a number of difficult spread draws and masses, failing on the forty-second, an easy kiss. Hoppe then added 58 hard-played shots. For the most part, his play was wide nursing, with frequent masses, spread draws and cushion shots. The balls broke badly. On the twenty-fourth shot, a masse, he fiddled badly, finally he let go and counted perfectly. He missed his fifty-ninth, a one-cushion shot, shot.

Cochran scored a cipher. Willie refused to take advantage and missed a cushion carom. Welker then made six and missed a three-cushion shot by a wide margin. The champion again gathered billiards from all directions, contending with many lineups, stopping at 35, after a masse-draw which slipped behind the ball.

The score at this stage was Cochran 320, Hoppe 209. The balls were left in perfect position in the upper left-hand corner. Cochrap appeared unnerved, but counted nine and then fanned a simple two-cushion shot.

It now was up to Hoppe either to do or die. Again whispering was heard all over the amphitheater. "Can Willie repeat?"

Soon the great master had the ivories rolling, making the 50 mark confronted by many lineups, but always he would wiggle out by a masse or difficult bank shot. He finally tamed the balls and soon his fifth straight victory was gained, with an unfinished run 91.

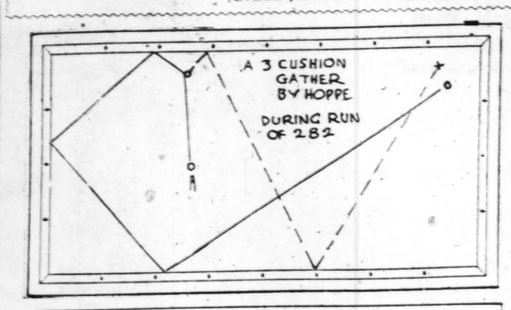

The final two games will be played today, at 3 p. m. Conti vs. Morningstar; at 8 p. m., Hoppe vs. Schaefer.

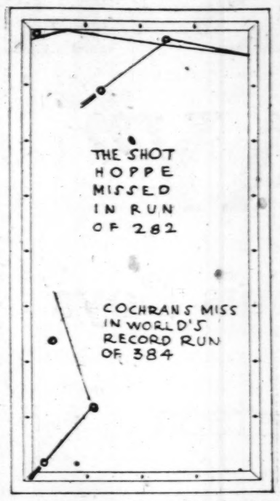

The standings:

	Won.	Lost.	H. Av.	G'd. Av.
Hoppe	5	0	66 2-3	37 39-53
Schaefer	4	1	200	50 3-38
Cochran	3	3	80	34 34-54
Conti	3	2	80	36 2-45
Horemans	2	4	66 2-31	27 38-62
Morningstar	1	4	50	29 13-52
Sutton	1	5	37 1-7	28 12-54

Rest After Princeton Game Aided Harvard in Yale Tilt, Roper Says

Two Weeks in Which to Recover From Injuries Put Crimson in Fine Condition for Bulldog, Says Coach of Tigers, Who Met Blue One Week After Battle With Harvard.

By W. W. Bill Roper.
(Copyright, 1921.)

The Harvard-Princeton-Yale series has ended in a tie for the first time in history. The games this year were probably closer and harder contested and more bitterly fought than any year of the series. I think the results this year have pretty well established that the team that plays its second big game with the interval of only a week is handicapped. Princeton played Harvard on November 5, the first game of the series.

Neither Harvard nor Princeton had been able to see the other play against Yale. While they had a general idea of what to expect, the offensive repertory of both teams was entirely different from anything shown before that game. Princeton used its open formation for the first time, and used it with telling effect. Harvard tried a flat pass from the quarterback to the third man in the tandem with great success. They also showed an open formation with a tackle and an end playing wide and a halfback inside of tackle helping him out on close and wide plays. Princeton won the game and I think the score about indicates the comparative strength of the two teams on that date.

A week later, Princeton played Yale. Yale had had an opportunity to watch the Tiger's strategy against Harvard and their players had not been under the strain of a gruelling game the week before.

Cost of Victory Over Harvard.

While Princeton played eleven men against Harvard, the victory was won at tremendous cost. Keck, Wittmer, Stinson and Cleaves were injured and it was a physical impossibility to get them into shape in a week. They went into the Yale game badly crippled and fought their heads off. A man who can't run is at a tremendous disadvantage in a football game. Yale won, 13—7, and this score about represents the relative strength of the two teams that played at New Haven.

The Yale team came through the Princeton game more fortunate as regards injuries than we came through the Harvard game. Yale went into the final game at Cambridge fairly confident; their team looked all right. The men had come through the first big game and no one was seriously hurt. Their play against Harvard was a disappointment to Yale men, who looked for a victory. The team seemed to lack an intangible, indefinite something. They played pretty hard in the first quarter and again not so hard in the second, and during the last half they showed spurts of good play and spurts of bad play. The Yale team was mentally overtrained, or stale, and it showed it by the way it played.

Harvard Mentally Alert.

Harvard, on the other hand, was mentally alert. The team played better as the game went on and finished much stronger than when it started. Two weeks ago a pretty badly battered team dragged itself out of Palmer Stadium. The rest of two weeks accomplished wonders and put the Harvard team back on its feet.

This is the first year that I can remember that Yale, Harvard and Princeton have been fairly evenly matched. Usually one or two of the three have completely outclassed the other or the others. If Harvard, Princeton and Yale are going to continue to have good teams, the team that plays its first game on the second Saturday of the series is going to have an advantage, and a big advantage, over the team that plays its second game on this same Saturday. The team that has a rest of two weeks between the first and second game is going to have just as big an advantage over the team that has one week's intermission.

CORNELL CROSS-COUNTRY RUNNERS CAPTURE TITLE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—Cornell distance runners easily captured individual and team honors yesterday in the thirteenth annual varsity cross country championship of the Intercollegiate Athletic Association. The Ithaca squad placed six of its seven entrants among the first 10 runners to finish the six-mile course. The Cornell team won with 18 points; Princeton was second, with 87; Syracuse third, with 108, and Yale fourth, with 111. The University of Cincinnati, sole Western competitor, finished thirteenth.

Lewis to Wrestle Silva.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 22.—Ed. (Strangler) Lewis, former heavyweight wrestling champion, and Justina Silva, who claims the wrestling championship of Portugal, will meet in a finish match here tomorrow night.

LEONARD AND FREEDMAN IN SHORT GO TONIGHT

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 22.—After more than five months' absence from the ring, Benny Leonard, world's lightweight champion, will meet Sailor Freedman of Chicago in an eight-round bout here tonight. Because the men will fight at catch weights, there is some question as to whether Leonard's title will be at stake.

Leonard has not been in action since he outpointed Rocky Kansas early last June. He said he expected to defeat the contender handily. Freedman also was confident.

"I have been waiting for this chance for more than a year," he said. "I never was in better shape and I am going to prove that Leonard is not the best lightweight in the world."

Walker Defeats Shade

By the Associated Press.

NEWARK, N. J., Nov. 22.—Mickey Walker of Elizabeth, N. J., last night was awarded a decision over Dave Shade, San Francisco welterweight, when the latter broke a bone in his right hand during the fifth round.

Carnegie Picks Anderson

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 22.—James Anderson, halfback, has been elected captain of the 1922 football team of the Carnegie Institute of Technology. B. N. Grenlay was elected captain of the Tech 1922 cross-country team.

Walter Goyne Drowned.

THELPHAS, Manitoba, Nov. 22.—Walter Goyne, winner of the 1920 Canadian dog derby and known as the "Going Kid of Alaska," was drowned in Moose Lake, 80 miles from Thelpas, on Nov. 13, it became known here last night.

Lincoln to Play At End Position Against Kansas

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Nov. 22.—Al Lincoln at end and "Scrubby" Hardin at center were the two changes in the Missouri lineup which Coach James Phelan announced today following several days of secret practice by the Tigers in preparation for the thirtieth annual game with Kansas at Lawrence next Thursday.

The changes, according to Phelan, are the result of injury to Bunker, Missouri center. Bunker's shoulder is injured so badly that it is unlikely that he will get into the Kansas game. Hardin played two years at center, before going to end this season. Lincoln at end will have a better chance to demonstrate his consistent ability as a pass receiver.

Both, Hardin and Lincoln have been working well in their new positions, according to Phelan's account of the secret practice operations. The change has effectively stopped the gap in the Tiger line, and strengthened the Missouri passing offensive as well.

If Phelan makes good his announced intention to leave Bunker on the bench, it will probably mean an important change in the Missouri offensive, for with Lincoln and Hamilton at the ends the Tiger aerial attack will be materially strengthened, while with Lincoln out of the backfield, his charges into the Jayhawker line will be lacking, and Missouri cannot be counted to gain so consistently by the scrimmage route.

LEADERS HOLD PLACES IN MID-WEST TOURNEY

By the Associated Press.

DES MOINES, Ia., Nov. 22.—Thirty-one bowlers competing yesterday in the annual Middle West Bowling Association's tournament, were unable to cause any upsets in the positions of the first five in either the singles or doubles events.

The highest score rolled in the singles was 611 by M. Kaplan of Kansas City. In the doubles the teams of L. Hammond and F. Middaugh of Fremont, Neb., and H. Eldson and W. Schoenman of Winner, S. D., each rolled 1140, which was the high score of the day.

Leaders in the various events of the tournament follows:

Five-man event: South Side Malleables, Milwaukee, 2878; Soning Clothiers, Fremont, 2868; Ziegler Chocolates, Milwaukee, 2837; Wooster Lambert No. 2, St. Louis, 2829; Smith's Arcades, Milwaukee, 2821.

Singles: G. Becker, Milwaukee, 725; E. Somers, Milwaukee, 685; W. O'Donnell, Kansas City, 652; G. Morrow, Kansas City, 641; G. Iden, Milwaukee, 639.

All events: E. Somers, Milwaukee, 1865; A. Froemming, Milwaukee, 1825; J. Smith, Milwaukee, 1825.

AMERICAN FENCERS WIN INTERNATIONAL TROPHY

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—American swordsmen won the Thomas international fencing trophy last night by defeating the members of the British team in seven of the 12 bouts in sabre competition. With four bouts still to be contested, the total score was Americans 24, British 18.

The Americans began the sabre series last night with a lead of four bouts, gained at Washington when they won the foils competition, 9 to 5, on Friday, and lost 8 to 6, in the bouts with dueling swords on the following night, making the two days' score, 17 to 12 in their favor. There were 10 men on each team, of which the British used four and the Americans four and two substitutes in the bouts last night. Sergt. John W. Diamond won his two bouts.

McMillin Offered Place

By the Associated Press.

DANVILLE, Ky., Nov. 22.—"Bo" McMillin, star quarterback of the Centre football team, has been offered the position as coach at Howard College, Birmingham, Ala., and has left for that city to confer with college officials. He will announce his decision after the conference, he said.

Pikers Scrimmage And Show Power Against Freshmen

Coach Rider Puts His Squad Through First Rough Workout Since Tulane Game.

The Pikers will hold their last scrimmage practice of the year this afternoon, when they line up against the freshman squad in preparation for the game Thursday with St. Louis University.

The workout yesterday afternoon saw the entire squad on the field and one of the most satisfactory practice periods of the season followed. The early part of the afternoon was given to signal drill, kicking and running down punts. Following this, the varsity opposed Coach Davis' freshman outfit in its first scrimmage since the Tulane game. The yearlings were no match for the regulars, who displayed a tremendous punch and scored three touchdowns in rapid succession.

Every man on the squad is in top-notch condition, the hospital list has disappeared and yesterday's scrimmage indicated that the Piker machine was full of power.

All Regulars in Condition.

If no injuries develop during the rough work today, every Red and Green warrior will be available for service. Doc Young's shoulder, hurt in the Missouri game, has entirely mended and the plunging fullback is expected to show the benefits of his long rest. Thumser's foot injury is a thing of the past, and the shifty halfback in kicking practice yesterday was getting height and distance in his punts. Kurrus, Dugdale and Hafner have recovered from their injuries and will be in the turkey day lineup. The morale is excellent and the team is at its best.

Strange as it may seem, Dutch Mathes, the Pikers' brilliant halfback, hasn't scored a point all season, although he has been one of the surest ground gainers. Dutch has figured prominently in carrying the ball within scoring distance, but a forward pass or a plunge by one of the other backs invariably has taken the ball over. The forward pass has been the Pikers' most potent scoring device, almost every touchdown being registered through this medium.

Billikens in Long Workout.

Three powerful searchlights flooded Sportsman's Park with light as the St. Louis University football team practiced yesterday long after darkness. The Billiken squad was drilled from 2 o'clock until close to 7:30. Coach O'Rourke was assisted by Freshman Coach McGinley, High School Coach Savage, Trainers Lennon and Scullins and McHale, a former Blue and White star.

The entire early afternoon was devoted to the perfecting of a speedy and puzzling air game. O'Rourke has drilled his cohorts well in this branch of the game, and after witnessing yesterday's workout several alumni critics voiced the opinion that the Billikens would startle Washington with the Pikers' own game.

Eggler, Drace, Horton and McConachie worked in the backfield last night while Capt. Finnegan, Roche, Todt, Levis and Bauman alternated on the flanks. Malloy, McCarthy and Quirk took turns at tackle and Kalkman, Grennan and Marion Webb handled the guard positions. Gerraghty performed at center during the entire session.

Freshmen Pound at Line.

When darkness prevented the eleven from seeing the passes the scrubs and freshmen were given the ball and ordered to use the Washington line plays. The scrimmage was hard and snappy and there was no slowing up when the scrubs hit the varsity forwards. The varsity held very well and on numerous occasions broke up plays in their inception.

"Red" Gerritzen, although he will not enter the turkey day classic, reported at 4:30 and played fullback for the scrubs. Gerritzen will devote his spare time to football and playing with the freshmen, endeavor to give the varsity line plenty of practice prior to Thursday. Gerritzen is a line smasher of the Mathes type and his rushes will give the Billiken line good experience.

MONNIG ROLLS 224 GAME

The Insurance Men's Bowling League completed its fifth week of the season on the Congress Alleys last night. As a result of last night's matches only one change in the standings took place. The American Central five replaced Markham & Co. in the tie with Cushman & Co. for second place. Monnig of the Muckerman team broke the high single individual record with a score of 224. Roy Horning of Cushman & Co., is second with 218.

SEARCH LIGHTS AID IN ARMY'S PRACTICE

By the Associated Press.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 22.—Searchlights shining from the parapets of old Fort Putnam to the army's football field have made it possible for the cadet eleven to work until long after dusk in preparation for the clash with navy at New York Saturday. The coaches are paying particular attention in the last drills to perfection of the cadets' tactics of defense. French and Smythe, who will do the kicking against the navy, have been devoting some time to booting.

Graduations Will Scrap All 1921 School Machines

Soldan to Lose All but Three Stars and Yeatman All but Two Regulars.

The Thanksgiving double-header will mark the closing of the high school football careers of a large number of 1921 players.

Coach Jimmy Cook's Soldan machine, winner of this year's championship and holder of the Yale Bowl, will be scrapped at the end of the present semester. The juggernaut which outclassed all of its high school rivals will be dismantled and all but three of the main cogs removed. Captain Meston, recently elected to lead the 1922 Brown and Gold; Meyer, an end, and "Red" Jones, the star halfback, are the remaining regulars.

Yeatman loses all its regulars except Hannibal, a lineman, and Meyer, the fullback. Coach Hill has suffered more from failure of students to return to school than from graduation in the past and was forced to build around two regulars this season, despite the fact that nine letter men of the 1920 squad were eligible.

Central Has Strong Reserves.

Central, because of its good reserve material, will not be badly treated, although the loss of Captain Fred Fisher, the great center; Erwin Fischer, a brainy quarter; Conrad and Jacobs, linemen, and Kessler, Ketcher and Mathews, ends and backs, is bound to leave holes in Coach "Mike" Walker's speedy eleven.

Coach Fenenga of Cleveland loses six regulars—Goeddal, Massengale, Gammeter, Clark, Kirn and Captain Weilbacher complete their studies prior to the 1922 season. The Carondelet eleven will be wealthy in talent next year, due to the large number of good prospects developed by Fenenga this season.

The unlucky McKinley team will be hard hit. Ten of the men developed by Coach Charles Hawkins will depart. Capt. Jestes, Hanley, Lazier and Crum, the brightest stars on the Crimson squad, finish their preparatory school football career. Roberts, Schillig, Bergman, Collins, Pauley and Kileen, all regulars, also graduate. Bokern and Kelly are the only two regulars of the McKinley eleven scheduled to return in 1922.

Final Games Thursday.

In the final doubleheader Thursday at High School Field Central meet Yeatman in the opener and Cleveland takes on McKinley. The opening game is scheduled for 1 o'clock instead of the usual 1:15 starting time.

Despite the fact that Soldan has captured the title much interest is being shown in the Turkey day games. Central, although regarded as the stronger team, will have its hands full defeating the constantly improving charges of Coach Hill of Yeatman. The green North End squad is just beginning to perfect its team play.

Cleveland and McKinley should furnish plenty of interesting football. McKinley has been coming fast and has had a decidedly improved spirit in the last few weeks. Coach Hawkins will place the strongest eleven shown to date on the field.

Coach Fenenga will start the game with practically the same eleven which faced Central. The Cleveland boss is well supplied with reserve material and will doubtless use the reserves to protect his players who are basketball stars also.

SPRINGFIELD FORFEITS CUP GAME TO PAULIANS

Unable to get a park for the replay of the second round United States Football Association cup tie with the Paulians of the Municipal League, the Springfield (Ill.) football club has forfeited the game to the locals. This was announced today by J. G. Barrett, secretary of the Western Committee, following receipt of a letter from James Peacock. The game, originally had been scheduled for Thursday.

If the regular contest here, the Paulians won, 1—0, but the committee ruled that it was not a complete game because only 25 minutes of the second half had been played.

WEISMULLER SETS MARK FOR 100-YARD PADDLE

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—John Weismuller of the Illinois Athletic Club last night set a world's record for a 100-yard swim in a 60-foot pool when he made the distance in 52 3-5s. The former record was 54s., held by Perry McGillivray of the I. A. C. Weismuller's record was made in the presence of several A. A. U. officials.

Kansas to Box Ray.

A TOUGH SUBJECT.

We take it that the members of the disarmament conference on next Thursday will drop China and Japan for the noice and discuss Turkey.

At that, there will be no universal peace until Turkey has had her wings clipped.

EDUCATION.

IN the fall a young man's fancy
To the gridiron lightly turns;
Tackles, punts and forward passes
Are among the things he learns.

But his studies he continues
When the snow begins to fall;
When the football season's over
He will take up basketball.

Out and indoor exercises
Make of him a better man;
He may be no man of letters
But he'll be a "Letter" man.

KNOWLEDGE IS POWER.

It goes without saying that the football "Letter" men know the game from A to Z.

It is reported that Ohio will not protest the Illini game. Indicating that the Buckeyes no longer have a lookin for the championship.

The man on the sandbox says that when the navies have been abolished and the standing armies cut to a corporal's guard, the army of the unemployed will be automatically reduced to a minimum.

The "Little Brown Jug" again reposes in Michigan's trophy room as the result of the 38-0 triumph over Minnesota. It was a jug-handled score.

Turkeys are selling at from 30 to 25 cents a pound on the hoof. Indicating that the turkey trot is coming back into popularity.

THE DAMP DAYS OF YORE.

The saddest words of tongue or pen
Are the once familiar words,
"Say When."
And furthermore we strongly miss
The barkeep's old, "Whose round was this?"

HORNSBY, .398, LEADS WINTER LEAGUE HITTERS

By the Associated Press.

Trailing Hornsby are the following five: Harry Heilmann, Mission, 385; Ty Cobb, San Francisco, 370; Carl Sawyer, Vernon, 373; Jack Knight, Vernon, .350, and George Sisler, Vernon, .350.

The Vernon club is in the lead, the Missions are second, Los Angeles third and San Francisco fourth.

Carnegie's Good Record

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Nov. 22.—The Carnegie Tech football team scored a goal from touchdown every time the pigskin was carried over the line this season. Thirty-four touchdowns were made by the plaid. Comfort, a tackle, kicked 31 goals and Newman, Sawyer and Robertson, back-field men, kicked the others. Tech scored 238 points against 54 by their opponents.

Mason Defeats Katz.

Pal Moore Boxes Peewee Kaiser In Coliseum Feature

Near-champion Bantam Will Box Promising Local Boy a 12-Round Bout.

By John E. Wray.

The real "coming-out" party of John "Peewee" Kaiser will take place tonight at the Coliseum, in Angelica Athletic and Physical Culture Club playing the host and collecting the admissions.

Peewee has often appeared in the limelight in a "sub-deb" capacity. As an amateur first and subsequently as a graduate amateur boxer of the fly and bantam weight divisions he has excited more than ordinary attention.

Twenty-six times has Peewee stepped to the resined ring canvas to engage in boxing contests and on 25 of these occasions he has been returned decisive winner. He lost two decisions, but subsequently he wiped them out with one quick smash of his right mitt for a knockout.

But all the past is as a mere preface—tonight's the night of Peewee's debut into title circles. The 18-year-old youngster will match mitts and wits, speed and punch with one of the masters of ring craft—Thomas Wilson (Pal) Moore of Memphis. It will be the first time the McKinley High School boy has met a boxer of real class in his entire career. Previously his most cheerful foes were second raters like Ashton Donza, Young Jack Dempsey, Joe Spack and the worn-out Kid Kirk.

Moore, for seven years, has been knocking at the title door. He has whipped Kid Williams, who has held the title to Kid Herman. He then defeated Herman, who lost it to Joe Lynch. Twice I saw him whip Lynch, once at St. Louis and once at Louisville—no-decision bouts at all. Johnny Buff now holds the title and Moore defeated Buff just before he took the title from Herman.

In other words, Moore has been every holder of the bantam title for seven years, but has never yet engaged in a title contest.

CENTRE COLLEGE AND NOTRE DAME INVITED

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—A post-season football game to be played here Dec. 3 or 10, with Centre College of Kentucky and Notre Dame as opponents is planned by New York Knights of Columbus. Invitations have been sent to the athletic associations of both institutions.

Centre and Notre Dame have appeared in the last three seasons, the former in a 6 to 0 victory over Harvard at Cambridge and Notre Dame in triumphs over the Army at West Point and Rutgers at the Polo Grounds.

BOY AND MAN HURT BY AUTOS

Henry Thomas, 6, and Frederick Dilthey, 55 Injured.

Frederick Dilthey, 55 years old, of 1943 Benton street, a paper carrier, suffered internal injuries and scalp wounds at 5 p. m. yesterday when struck by an automobile driven by Dominic Palazzolo, 17 years old, of 5060 Beacon avenue, in front of 2109 North Broadway. He was taken to the city hospital. The driver told the police Dilthey crossed the street in front of a southbound Broadway car and ran directly in front of the automobile, southbound also.

Henry Thomas, 6, of 2832½ Ohio avenue, suffered concussion of the brain and scalp wounds at noon yesterday when he was struck by an automobile driven by Julian L. Hofman of 3168 Oregon avenue, at Ohio and Gravois avenues. The boy was on his way home from school when the accident occurred.

TAKE MASTIN'S YEAST VITAMON TABLETS TO PUT ON "STAY-THERE" FLESH

AND INCREASE YOUR ENERGY QUICKLY, EASILY AND SURELY AT SMALL COST

Thin or run-down folks will find this simple test well worth trying. First weigh yourself and measure yourself. Next take Mastin's VITAMON—two tablets with every meal. Then weigh and measure yourself again each week and continue taking Mastin's VITAMON regularly until you are satisfied with your gain in weight and energy. Mastin's VITAMON contains highly concentrated yeast-vitamines as well as the two other still more important vitamines (Fat Soluble A and Water Soluble C), all of which Science says you must have to be strong, well and fully developed. It is now being used by thousands who appreciate its convenience, economy and quick results. By increasing the nourishing power of what you eat Mastin's VITAMON supplies just what your body needs to feed the shrunken tissues, strengthen internal organs, clear the skin and renew shattered nerve force without upsetting the stomach or causing gas. Pimples, boils and skin eruptions vanish as if by magic under its healthful, purifying influence. But it is not a question of how much better you look and feel, or what your friends say or think—the scales and tape measure will tell their own story. A two weeks' test will surprise you.

IMPORTANT! While the amazing health-building value of Mastin's VITAMON has been clearly and positively demonstrated in cases of lack of energy, nervous troubles, anemia, indigestion, constipation, skin eruptions, poor complexion and a generally weakened physical and mental condition, it should not be used by anyone who OBJECTS to having their weight increased to normal. Be sure to remember the name—Mastin's VI-TA-MON—the original and genuine yeast-vitamine tablet. There is nothing else like it, so do not accept imitations or substitutes. You can get Mastin's VITAMON Tablets at all good druggists, such as All Enderle Drug Stores, Johnson Bros., Judge & Dolph, E. A. Medler, Pauley's, Wolff-Wilson, Huger's.

Thanksgiving Day Ends the Roll Call

Now is your opportunity to make it a real day of thanks for the disabled ex-service men and suffering humanity generally.

Where Your Membership Dollar Goes

It gives instant care for the injured, sick and destitute at all calamities.

It is the support of nurses of mercy who scorn the menace of contagion and infection, there where human beings are falling from pestilence and starvation, and Everywhere the crushed heart of humanity cries for aid it is there.

PRICES IRREGULAR ON STOCK MARKET; TENDENCY HEAVY

Trade Still Fairly Active Though Slackening— Toward Close Changes Mostly Fractional—Bonds Are Steady.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted financial review today, says:

"Trading in stocks, while still fairly active, showed another slackening, and prices were again extremely irregular, with a tendency to heaviness. The speculative forces at work plainly were very mixed. Short covering in some issues being paralleled by short selling in others. Toward the close fractional changes were the rule, with declines perhaps in the majority. Bonds were steady with business moderate. Call money opened at 5 per cent and was raised to 5½ per cent toward the close of the last hour.

Exchange Market Quiet.

"Quietness still prevailed among the foreign exchanges. A slight heaviness appeared in European rates during the morning, sterling going as low as $3.97½, but a good recovery was made later in the day. After rallying 1¼ cents from the low sterling showed a net price of ¼ of a cent and French francs were up 7 points at 7.11 cents. Belgian marks were slightly lower at 6.26 or a cent. Italian spinners apparently have reentered the cotton market after about a month's absence as a result of distrust of earlier estimates as to the size of our crop. At all events the Liverpool market was again strong and this strength found its reflection on this side of the water, with the trade expecting a sharp falling off in ginnings. Furthermore, the short side of the market is less popular. The January delivery sold as high as 17.27 cents and after a 4-point reaction was up 15 points on the day. It would appear, therefore, that the reaction, due to public realization of the fact that the Department of Agriculture had underestimated the present crop by one million bales, has terminated. During the course of this reaction the spot price lost approximately 3 cents, or half of the previous rally from the low level of the spring and summer.

Export Demand Absent.

"In the wheat market continued absence of export demand offset the bullish effect of lack of rain in the Southwest. The latter condition prevents selling on the short side while the former is an effective deterrent to bullish activity. Toward the close May was unchanged at $1.01."

Wall Street News and Comment

—SPECIAL DAILY—

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—The volume of business was smaller in the stock market today, reflecting the uncertain state of mind in which the fluctuations of the last week have left speculators.

The Bond Market.

Much interest was taken in the fact which the announcement of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas reorganization plan would have on existing issues. One surprise feature was the offer to exchange the present first 4s for an equal amount of a new 4 and a new 5 per cent security, likewise constituting a prior lien series. This would make the present Missouri, Kansas & Texas into a 4½ per cent bond and the result was a quick jump of 1½ points. The second 4s were up from 2½ to 3 points while the 5 per cent notes got well above 50 on the assumption that they would be worth more than 60 under the reorganization.

Dry Goods Market Review.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—Cotton goods were in moderate demand in undiminished linen variety, with yarns quiet and with an easing tendency. Wool goods were quiet, with prices tending slightly upward on most of the piece silk was higher. Jobbers were buying very little except for prompt shipment of goods for contract delivery that must be had.

"KATY" REORGANIZATION PLAN MADE PUBLIC

Fixed Interest Charges Reduced From $7,429,376 to $4,917,717—Capitalization Replaced.

Reorganization managers of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railway, which has its general offices in the Railway Exchange Building, announced in New York today that the directors of the road and 18 committees representing various security holders have agreed upon a plan to bring the road out of receivership, of which the principal features are:

Reduction of the fixed interest bearing debt of the railroad from $146,543,142 to $100,320,913, and of the fixed interest charges (including sinking fund payments) from $7,429,376 to $4,917,717. In addition, the new company is to have $57,500,000 5 per cent convertible adjustment mortgage bonds bearing a contingent interest charge of $2,875,000, cumulative from Jan. 1, 1925.

Total capitalization of the old company, stocks and bonds, of $248,095,000 to be replaced by the new company's bonds and preferred stock aggregating $182,320,000 and 783,155 shares of its common stock without par value.

Assessments of $20 per share on the $13,000,000 old preferred and $25 per share on the $63,288,257 old common to provide $18,420,000 new cash for reorganization purposes, of which $4,042,000 is to be used to pay off receiver's certificates and bank loans, $1,275,000 to pay deferred interest under the plan, $1,000,000 to meet next year's equipment trust maturities, $4,000,000 to provide the new company with a working balance and $8,103,000 is reserved for additions and betterments, and the expenses of reorganization.

Holders of the existing preferred stock, on payment of $20 a share, of which $8 is to be paid at time of depositing the old stock and the remainder in three equal installments at intervals of not less than 30 days, are to receive per share $14 in 10-year prior lien mortgage 6 per cent bonds, $6 in adjustment mortgage 5 per cent bonds and one share of new common stock.

Holders of existing common stock, on payment of $25 a share, of which $10 is to be paid at time of depositing stock and the balance in three equal installments at intervals of not less than 30 days, are to receive per share $17.50 in 10-year prior lien 6 per cent bonds, $7.50 in adjustment mortgage 5 per cent bonds and one share of new common stock.

The reorganization managers, J. W. Seligman & Co. and Haligarten & Co., of New York, say of the plan in part:

"It will be observed that the plan offers holders of the old first fours an increase in their coupon interest rate of one-half of 1 per cent, besides a 40-year maturity instead of the present 1990 maturity, which together give an additional income yield of over ¾ per cent. Of this issue $39,999,500 are outstanding. Five usses aggregating $12,289,000 of existing bonds, receive 100 per cent in fixed interest obligations of the new company. With these exceptions the principal of existing issues is largely scaled down in the new bonds bearing fixed interest.

"Deposits of securities for the purpose of participating in the reorganization plan must be made with the various respective depositaries named in the plan on or before January 7, 1922. The reorganization managers in their absolute discretion may determine whether or when a sufficient amount of the securities of the various classes shall have been deposited to render it advisable to declare the plan operative.

The Katy road went into receivership in 1915, when it failed to refund $19,000,000 in short term notes, although it had continuously earned its fixed charges. The road had 3143 miles of main line and branch tracks. C. E. Schaff is het receiver.

Associated with the reorganization managers in an underwriting syndicate are Speyer & Co. and the Equitable Trust Co. The syndicate announced today that the $18,400,000 certificates provided for in the reorganization had been immediately oversubscribed. This was regarded as reflecting a change in investment sentiment and confidence in the road's future.

TEXT OF BRIAND'S SPEECH TO ARMAMENT CONFERENCE

peace is to be disturbed in the world, I shall not be the one to disturb it. But, gentlemen, precisely because I have urged everybody on the road of peace, because I have done everything in my power in order to obtain peace, I feel all the more the great weight of the responsibility which I have assumed, and if tomorrow, because I shall have been too optimistic, I saw my country again attacked, trampled under foot, bleeding because I had weakened her, gentlemen, I should be a most despicable traitor.

Upper Silesia Affair.

"It is that situation that we have got to take into account, gentlemen, and the weight of the responsibilities with which we are burdened.

"Only the other day, the course of events turned in such a way that it certainly became acute, as you know, in Upper Silesia. I have already referred to this subject. Germany, who did not think that the French people were ready to undertake a military operation, suddenly informed us that she was going to send the Reichswehr to the spot in Upper Silesia in order to preserve order.

"These were momentous times for us, and although I have been through many critical times in my life, I may say that no hour was perhaps of more importance than that, and that I clearly and definitely made up my mind, and I told Germany that such a thing was not possible, and that if Germany undertook a thing of the sort she would have to bear the consequences, and the language was understood.

"But gentlemen, if I had spoken without having the French army back of me, what would my words have become? And if the event had actually taken place, what would have become of Europe itself? Europe is still in a troublous state. It is composed of young states, newly come to life. Who could say what such conflict might have become?

"That is the problem and that was the problem, and the struggle did not take place because it was felt that there was still a sufficient force in Europe and in France to preserve order.

"Quite recently another attempt has been made, a certain attempt at the restoring of the old order of things in the center of Europe, that might have set fire to the powder magazine again. Nothing happened because the Allies were in perfect understanding and the incident was peaceably settled.

"Gentlemen, I give you these reflections for you to ponder over. You will see that there is nothing in them that would draw us aside from the path that leads to final peace. I apologize for having been with you so long and for having so trespassed upon your attention. Perhaps at another time the President will be less inclined to allow me to speak.

The thought of reducing the armaments, which was the whole purpose of this conference, is not one from which we would feel disinterested from the point of view of land armaments. We have shown it already. Immediately after the armistice, demobilization began, and demobilization began as rapidly and as completely as possible. According to the military laws of France there are three classes of men; that is, three generations of young men under the flag. That law is still extant; that law is still valid.

Service Period Reduced.

It has not been abrogated yet, and the Government has taken the responsibility to reduce to two years the time spent under the flag, and instead of three classes —three generations of young men —we have only two undergoing military service. It is therefore an immediate reduction by one-third that has already taken place in the effectives—and I am speaking of the normal effectives of the metropoles, leaving aside troops needed for colonial occupation or obligation imposed by treaty in Rhineland or other countries or other plebiscites. We do not think that endeavor was sufficient and in the future we have plans in order to further restrict the extent of our armies. In a few days it is certain that the proposals of the Government will be passed in the Chamber, and in order to further reduce the military service by half. That is to say, there will be only one class and a half actually serving. The metropolitan French army would be therefore reduced by half, but if anybody asks us to go further, to consent to other reductions, I should have to answer clearly and definitely that it would be impossible for us to do it without exposing ourselves to a most serious danger.

You might possibly come and tell us "this danger that you are exposed to, we see it, we realize it, and we are going to share it with you. We are going to offer you all means—put all means at your disposal in order to secure your safety."

Would Strike New Plan.

Immediately, if we heard those words, of course, we would strike upon another plan. We should be only too pleased to demonstrate the sincerity of our purpose. But we understand the difficulties and the necessities of the statesmen of other countries. We understand the position of other peoples who have also to face difficult and troublous situations.

We are not selfish enough to ask other people to give a part of their sovereign national independence in order to turn it to our benefit and come to our help. We do not expect it; but here I am appealing to your consciences. If France is to remain alone, facing the situation such as I have described, and without any exaggeration—you must not deny her what she wants in order to insure her security. You must let her do what she has to do, if need arise and if the time comes.

"I should be the last one here to try to restrict the noble endeavors which are being made here in order to limit armament as in the conference which has been convened, with such noble purposes in view; and I should like to be able to say that I foresee no limit, no restriction to your labors and to the results which you may achieve. Any question here can be debated and can be resolved upon, but I must draw your attention to one thing: Moral disarmament of France would be very dangerous.

"France Wants Peace."

"Allow me to say it would be most unjust. We do not enjoy the sufficient condition. We should be ready to do it, but the time has not come yet to give up our defense for the sake of final peace in Europe. We have to know, however, that France is not morally isolated; that she still has with her the men of good will, and the hearts of all people who have fought with her on the same battlefield. The true condition of a moral disarmament in Germany—I mean to say, I am referring to these noxious elements of which I have already spoken—the true condition at this time of disarmament in Germany lies in the fact that it should be known over there that France is not alone, and then I feel quite sure that the poisonous propaganda of which I have spoken will simply run up dead against the wall; that it will not be able to go through, and that nobody anywhere will believe in it. If those that still harbor evil designs know that, and if those that entertain happy ideas of peace—this working class that want to return to a normal state of peace—if it is known in Germany that France is not morally alone, peace will come back much quicker, and the words of anger, the words of revenge, will be simply preached in the wilderness. It will be impossible for Germany to reconstruct a defensive army, and she will be able to install democratic institutions, and then we can all hope for final conditions of peace. Everything that France can do in this direction she will do. In fact, she has already done much. She did not hesitate to open conversations with the German Government in order to settle this painful question of reparation for the devastated regions. Everything has been done and will be done in order to restore normal conditions, and the hour will come when everything will be settled, but the hour has not come yet.

Hope in Conference.

"If by direction given to the labors of the conference it were possible somewhere over there in Europe—if it were possible to say that the outcome of this conference is indirect blame and opprobrium cast upon France —if it were possible to point out France as the only country in the world that is still imperialistic, as the only country that opposes final disarmament, then, gentlemen, indeed this conference would have dealt us a severe blow; but I am quite sure that nothing is further from your minds and from your intentions.

"If, after listening to this argument, after weighing the reasons which you have just heard, you consider it then as valid, then, gentlemen, you will still be with us and you will agree with me and say that France cannot possibly do anything but what she has actually done."

As Good As Its Roof

No building is better than its roof for the roof plays the most important part in protecting the contents of the building. The roof gets all the wear of the weather; the hot rays of the summer sun, the pelting rains of autumn, the driving sleet of winter, the melting snows of spring. So, make those new buildings good by covering them with

RU-BER-OID ROOFING—SHINGLES

These Ruberoid Products, by tests of actual service, under extreme weather conditions, have proved their lasting qualities to be of the best. The fiercest rays of the tropic sun, the soaking of the rainy season, the zero weather of winter, the wet snows of spring—these will not penetrate the tough coating of asphalt composition of these roofing products.

Do not confuse Ruberoid with other ready-roofing. There are many that look like it, feel like it, and seem like it in every way, but they are not like it. There is only one Ruberoid —manufactured by The Ruberoid Co., the pioneer in the field of ready-roofings.

Render-ing a Positive Service

When Magnitude Discards Mystery

Frankness is being better recognized a big asset in all human relations, including business.

The bigger the business, the greater the need for frankness.

It wasn't always so: in fact, until only a few years ago, the reverse was true so far as actual practice was concerned and magnitude paid a penalty for the mystery in which it chose to cloak itself.

As one of the biggest of the big industrial and commercial organizations, the Standard Oil Co. used to exercise its full proportionate share of mystery. That this policy has been changed — deliberately and conspicuously—is a development that is as radical as it is interesting to students of publicity.

For three years, Standard Oil has been out of its shell telling the public exactly how it was doing things, why it was doing things and what it was driving at. It has made large use of advertising space in newspapers without regard to their attitude toward itself. It has conspicuously evidenced its desire to talk to the people and to put out its products for a price that included good will.

Today, instead of merely making its products available to those who MUST buy, Standard Oil is employing extensive publicity to make people WANT to buy. There is a very great difference, just about the difference between the exaction of tribute in one case and the rendering of positive service in the other.

Entirely aside from commercial considerations, a policy of frankness and service will tend to iron out some disagreeable wrinkles in the things that are. And the benefits will go to both sides of the equation.

TO render a positive service is not alone the desire of those responsible for the management of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana). It is a well-formed, clearly-understood determination.

This determination to render a positive service is expressed in the multitude of products manufactured by this Company from crude petroleum. The housewife, the motorist, the farmer, the physician, the fabricator of raw materials, almost every special branch of human endeavor, has been considered and that part of the petroleum which will render to each the greatest service, has been segregated and made instantly available.

This is the method chosen by the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) to make tangible the positive service it is endeavoring to render.

The campaign of advertising which is being carried on has as its object a frank discussion of the ways and means used by the Company in delivering this service, a discussion which tells what it is doing and how it is doing it, and why.

That there is a better understanding of the motives of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) and a feeling of increasing confidence in its integrity and straightforward frankness is indicated by the number of favorable comments which the campaign has elicited from the editorial departments of newspapers, big and little, throughout the eleven states served.

Justice, equity, frankness, a basic desire to render a positive service, and a determination to take all of the people into its confidence are the underlying principles governing this organization.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

When you seek information through it is impossible to answer queries by mail or telephone. Query for Monday must be mailed or sent beforehand.

LEGAL INFORMATION

(Prepared by a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association.)

DIXON.—You can sue the real estate agent for your damages.

W. C. B.—Hunting is not allowed in St. Louis County on Sunday.

P. S. BEARER.—You cannot be held for the rent unless you agreed to assume the lease.

DOCTOR.—It is not unlawful to have a still to distill water if it is used for no other purpose.

HENRY.—Write to the Secretary of State at Little Rock, Ark., for information concerning the soldiers bonus for that state.

E. A. G.—Write to the War Department, Washington, D. C., concerning the lost discharge papers of a Spanish War veteran.

N. O. P.—If you signed a paper agreeing to buy a certain number of shares in a company before the company was actually formed and you have paid part of the amount you can be held for the remainder.

BUBBY B.—The German marriage is binding and the man who married a girl in Germany cannot marry an American girl without getting a divorce.

H. E. W.—If the property was in joint names, the survivor can sell as soon after death as he likes and the stockholders have no interest in the property.

C. B. C.—An employer is not compelled to have his employes insured. You would have to sue to obtain compensation for any injury received while in his employ.

X. Y. Z.—If a man was charged with assault to kill eight years ago and can be found he could be prosecuted if he returned to Illinois, where the assault was committed.

R. S. V. P.—Marriage between a paroled convict and a free woman, without the consent of the Warden, is legal in every state in the Union.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS

(Answers prepared by a physician of authority. Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnoses or treatment of individual cases will not be given. Questions that cannot be publicly discussed, if showing evidences of sincerity, will be answered when accompanied by stamped envelope.)

WARREN.—A pain directly in the top of the head indicates some derangement of the organs of generation.

M. S.—Scrofula is tuberculosis of the lymphatic glands. All forms of tuberculosis are contracted in the same way.

P. P.—We could not have any idea of your throat trouble without seeing it. You might be benefited by a spray of 10 grains of adrenalin chloride in 1 ounce of liquid vaseline.

EAGLE.—The wearing of a truss for six years, or any number of years, would not necessarily benefit a rupture, although there are occasions when it is exceptional cases to be attained.

MAY.—Anything which causes an abnormal condition of the heart is dangerous, as the heart is a most important part of the body and you would do well to stop tobacco, with digitalis, if necessary, to slow the heart action.

L. E. M.—A chronic constipation is one which has existed for a long time. The causes of it are: Disregarding natural calls for relief, inefficient food, constipating qualities, especially bile; loss of muscular power in the abdominal walls, improper food, stricture and displaced organs, tumors, etc.

A SUFFERER.—A derangement of the stomach, extending over a number of years, could not cause cancer or ulcer. You no doubt have a chronic catarrh of the stomach. We think systematic stomach washing, and carefully selected diet would help. Salol, 5 grains, two capsules, three or four times a day, is suggested, together with digestants, at first, such as essence of pepsin, for the bowels well regulated always. The painful spots in the back are no doubt due to the stomach trouble. If unable to pay a physician go to a good clinic.

FOR SALE
Player-Piano
$160

Will buy my high-grade, 88-note player-piano, 100 rolls, cabinet and bench included. Will take some cash and $10 per month. Call at 1101 Olive st., in store, ask for player-piano No. 163758. Will be open until 10 o'clock. (2)

A BRAND-NEW Player-Piano for $295, f. o. b. factory; no camouflage about it. We have them for sale at this price and we want to sell them. No bait about this ad. The other fellows will tell you we can't do it, and that we don't do it, but we do do it often every day. You will buy one of them, too, if you see them, for the very good reason that you cannot buy a new player of like value elsewhere within $200 of this price. Every person who is willing to pay $500 for a player-piano, who don't look at this $295 new player is cheating himself.
THE RUDOLPH WURLITZER CO.,
1006 Olive st. (c65)

HOW can you sell that player for $295? That's what nearly every piano man in town has said to us. Well, we have told them all the same thing. We can do it because we are willing to sell on shorter profits than anybody else in the country and rely on volume. Every person that calls at our store who is any judge of a player-piano buys of us because they quickly recognize the wonderful value we are offering in this player at $295, f. o. b. factory. You cannot duplicate it elsewhere within $200 of this price. Make us prove what we claim.
THE RUDOLPH WURLITZER CO.,
1006 Olive st. (c65)

MUST dispose of my beautiful $575 upright piano at a great sacrifice. Call Mrs. Heinz, 5044 Enright. Forest 2834J. (c12)

DO you want a real piano bargain? If it is necessary to sell my high-grade piano for 25 per cent off of its real value, Geo. H. A. Franke, 4137 Castleman. (c12)

PLAYER-PIANOS—We have several standard 88-note player-pianos that are stored with us; some of the people have asked us to sell them regardless of price. Call at LEHMAN PIANO CO., Lehman Corner, 1101 Olive st. (2)

MR. BARGAIN HUNTER—You'll find some second-hand bargain in this column that will interest you, and you will go down to some store tomorrow to see it, and if it has not "just been sold," you won't like it, anyway. The salesman will tell you he didn't think you would, etc. Then he will show you a nice-looking one for twice the price of the bargain you came down to see. Don't fall for that. Say to the salesman we will go down to Wurlitzer's, and see that new player-piano they are selling for $295. He will say to you, they don't sell any new player for $295. They can't do it. They advertise they will, but it cannot be done, etc., etc. Then he will try all the harder to sell you one at $500 or $600 one that has been used for demonstrating. The original price of which was $900? Keep strongly in your mind that every argument he used against the $295 new player is absolutely not so, but you still insist you are going to see whether or not Wurlitzer's sells brand-new players at $295. Come in here and you will find we do this very thing, and you will see, too, that these new players we sell for $295, f. o. b. factory, are the equal of the players you have been looking at which were offered you around $500 at the other store. Seeing is believing.
THE RUDOLPH WURLITZER CO.,
1006 Olive st. (c65)

YOU want to buy a real good player-piano for a small amount of money; that's why you are reading these bargain ads. You don't have to buy a second-hand player to do that very thing. For $295, f. o. b. factory, you can buy a brand-new player-piano from us. Similar pianos are sold by other stores at about $500. We sell these players, too; bear that in your mind when you come in our store. We don't try to get you to buy a player at $500 or $600. Any person who sees this player and fails to buy it, does not know values. Look at it and see for yourself; that's fair enough, isn't it? We are the largest manufacturers of musical instruments in the world. From the manufacturer to othe home.
THE RUDOLPH WURLITZER CO.,

THE DOUBLE CHIN MASSAGE.

BEFORE starting any kind of massage it is well to look carefully to see which way the wrinkles or superfluous flesh run, to be able to smooth out the wrinkles or reduce the superfluous flesh, or by a strong rotary motion feed the tissues and fill up the hollows. I have already, spoken about several portions of the face and the best method of massaging them, and today I want you to consider the way to obliterate that ugly, disfiguring double chin.

You will all agree with me that there is nothing that mars that youthful rotundity, the classical contour and beautiful outline of a face like a double chin. I always like to tell you what causes these facial blemishes that I have been considering so that you may be able to avoid as many pitfalls on the road to beauty as possible.

We can no longer blame a double chin on the high collar, since they are no longer worn, but an improper posture and carriage of the head has much to do in causing Nature to deposit the fatty flesh in an unsightly lump underneath the chin more than any other portion of the face. This flesh has a tendency to be exceedingly flabby and therefore must be dealt with in a rather strenuous manner.

Place the hands so as to permit a good firm pressure of the thumb, slowly pressing the thumbs from the center up toward the ear. This stimulates the circulation and causes new blood to flow to the flabby tissues, stimulating them and thereby filling out the hollows and wearing away excessive fat. The only way that a double chin can be permanently removed is by this persistent application every night, followed in the morning by the chin rub that I gave you in the reducing exercises, but more than anything else it is important for you to remember that ice cold water or a piece of ice has the effect of making the flesh firm. Therefore, when you use this treatment in the morning, be sure to apply the ice to the double chin so as to stimulate the sagging flesh and make it firm. This keeps it in the position into which you have massaged it.

In cases where the persons are very stout and the double chin does not respond readily to the above treatment, the wearing of a bandage or beauty mask may be a permissible aid in your fight against this double chin. If you wish to see what a difference the removal of a double chin will do notice your face in the mirror the next time your hands are putting back this disfiguring fat. I am sure that you will be willing to spend the few minutes necessary for the persistent massage against the double chin.

Side by side with this daily attention through massage and the bath must be the determination that you will carry the head well up, poised in the proper relation to the rest of the body when you walk on when you sit—that you will not fall into the evil habit of putting your head into position that causes the flesh to double up underneath the chin when you retire at night. In other words, to obliterate the double chin means eternal vigilance against excessive diet and improper posture and faithfulness in the massage.

"THE LOVE COWARDS"

By HAZEL DEYO BATCHELOR

(Copyright, 1921, by Public Ledger Co.)

Because she is disappointed in one man, Nancy Hathaway becomes a love coward. Eager to get away she accepts a position as governess to a little child in a lonely house on the Massachusetts coast, and there discovers that Bruce Henderson, Trix's uncle, has a sinister influence over the child. From the beginning Nancy clashes with him, but when he orders her to leave, Miss Henderson, who has engaged Nancy, interferes and Nancy stays on. One night, thinking to send her flying by using physical violence, Bruce seizes Nancy in his arms and kisses her roughly. To her horror she finds that she cannot hate him as she should. Dr. Hunt, who has been called in to see Trix, invites her and the child to tea, and although Bruce has given orders that Trix is to have nothing to do with the townspeople, Nancy disobeys him and goes. She suddenly decides to confide in the doctor and tells him the truth.

CHAPTER XXXIV.
Punishment!

DR. HUNT showed no surprise. He looked at Nancy with his blue eyes level and kind and said:

"You think something will happen? What happened before?"

"I don't know, but he has the power to frighten her. For some reason he likes to make her suffer. It is necessary for me to be with her constantly, for whenever he talks with her alone she gets into a frightful state."

She told him hurriedly of the bruise on the child's wrist that she had discovered when she first arrived, and of the difficulties she had encountered in keeping Trix out of his way. If she felt any guilt in repeating these things, that so far she had kept entirely to herself, it was swallowed up by her fear for the child's safety and her need to confide in someone.

"I just want to feel that I can call on you," Nancy finished somewhat tremulously. "It will be such a comfort."

He put out his hand and took hers suddenly, holding it close in his for a moment. There was a sudden quick light in his eyes as he spoke.

"Indeed you can call on me. I want you to feel that I am right here ready to serve you whenever you need me, and you're not to be afraid."

Nancy smiled at this.

"I won't be," she whispered. And afterward as she and Trix began to walk back home she carried with her the warmth and comfort of his promise. Dr. Hunt was a real friend; she could trust him, and yet in spite of the fact that he was worthy any woman's respect, his steady blue eyes had no power to arouse in her the sudden emotion that Bruce Henderson's dark ones had. She wished suddenly and fiercely that she had never come to Rock Haven, and yet as her eyes fell on Trix's little figure, resentment melted within her. Trix was better. Trix needed her, and if she persevered Trix's life might be saved. Surely it was worth some personal inconvenience to herself to accomplish so much, and then Nancy's heart almost stopped, for quick footsteps sounded behind her and the next moment Bruce Henderson had caught up with them.

He knew where they had been. Nancy was suddenly certain of that, but he said nothing beyond a curt greeting and then continued to walk with them in silence until they reached the house.

As they stepped into the hall he spoke to Nancy suddenly.

"Miss Hathaway, you've seen fit to disregard my wishes regarding Trix and from now on she will no longer be under your care. Ellen," he called, as the woman came out of one of the rooms and paused to look at them, "bring down Miss Trix's things from upstairs, and put them in the room next to mine. And now, Miss Hathaway," he said, turning to Nancy. "Perhaps you will see the uselessness of remaining here any longer, even for the pleasure of my charming company. I am not a very patient man and I've put up with a great deal of interference from you. Of course, you have been ably abetted by my sister, but I am sure she will be reasonable when I have had a talk with her. Perhaps," he suggested, a mocking light in his eyes, "you might find a situation with the doctor's family. He seems to have taken a great liking to you."

Nancy ignored this thrust and rushed forward to meet Miss Henderson, who having heard the voices, was coming quickly down the stairs.

"We went to the doctor's to tea," she was explaining feverishly, "and he discovered it somehow. Now he's having Trix moved into the room next to his, but you won't allow it, will you, Miss Henderson. You know what it will mean to Trix!"

CHAPTER XXXV
A Desperate Plan

NANCY with her frightened eyes on Miss Henderson's face waited for her to respond. She noticed that the older woman flushed darkly and then, without a moment's hesitation, she went quickly over to her brother and said something to him in a low voice.

But Bruce put her lightly out of his way.

"There's no need of your putting up any kind of an argument, Eliza," he said brusquely. "I've listened to enough. I didn't approve of adding Miss Hathaway to the household in the beginning, if you remember, but in spite of everything I have said she seems determined to stay." His eyes flashed for a moment in Nancy's direction with what she felt to be a direct reminder of what had actually happened, and she felt her cheeks burn.

"Now I intend to remove Trix from her care entirely; that will end matters. And nothing you can say will have any weight with me. I have made up my mind."

With a little smothered sob, Trix flew across the room and clung to Nancy desparately.

"You won't let him take me, you won't, you wen't?" she said over and over, appealing to that faith and trust that Nancy had aroused in her childish heart. How often had Nancy assured Trix that she was safe; that she had nothing to fear, and it was because Trix had learned to trust Nancy utterly that she was defying her uncle now. Nancy knew that!

She had only a few seconds to make up her mind. It meant either losing Trix forever or taking a desperate step, the idea for which had crept into her thoughts several times. Before Bruce could stride across the room and pull Trix hastily from Nancy's arms, Nancy had stooped and was whispering quick words into the child's ear.

"Trix, you must trust me. You know I've always kept my word to you, but I need your help, dear. Go to your uncle and wait for me. As soon as I can I'll come for you. You must believe me, dear. I'll come for you. Don't forget."

She smiled for a moment into the child's anguished eyes, conscious that if Trix had been the ordinary child her terror would have swept away her reason. As it was, something about Nancy's firm, resolute voice steadied the child; she still believed. Her faith in Miss Nancy's ability to perform miracles was still with her and, marvel of marvels, Trix forced a pitiful little smile. Nancy could have cried at the pathetic bravery of it and she pledged herself then and there to be worthy of Trix's faith. But it cost her a pang to see Bruce carry the child away with him and the tears were running down her cheeks as she turned to Miss Henderson. However, one glance at the other woman's face told Nancy that this was no time for useless recriminations. She made no attempt to reproach Miss Henderson and neither did she take her into her confidence.

Whatever was done, Nancy must manage by herself, but how? Her plan was to get Trix away, to take matters into her own hands and simply kidnap the child. The risks of such a desperate move were many and the results might be serious. Nancy was apt to get into trouble; she realized that, but there was no room in her heart for thoughts of herself. Trix was the one to be considered, and it was impossible to leave her with Bruce Henderson any longer than was absolutely necessary.

MY FAVORITE STORIES
By IRVIN S. COBB

(One of a series of short funny stories by the celebrated American humorist which will appear daily in the Post-Dispatch on this page.)

WHY THE MAJOR DIDN'T SUIT.

ON a voyage of one of the Cunard liners from New York to Liverpool a Maj. H. Reynolds of London was registered on the passenger list. The purser, running over the names, assigned to the same stateroom as fellow travelers, this Maj. Reynolds and a husky stockman from the Panhandle of Texas.

"Look here, Cap," he demanded, "what kind of a joker is this here head clerk of yours? I can't travel in the same stateroom with that there Maj. Reynolds. I can't and I won't! So far as that goes, neither one of us likes the idea."

"What complaint have you?" asked the skipper. "Do you object to an army officer for a traveling companion?"

'Not generally," stated the Texan—"only this happens to be the Salvation Army. That there Major's other name is Henrietta!"

ON OYSTERS.

We always thought the oyster's life
Was one of soft, luxurious ease,
Devoid of care, remote from strife
Beneath the blue abysmal seas.
We fancied, though it held no thrills
That stir a more developed mind,
At least it did not bring the ills
That plague and trouble human kind.

We've envied him his perfect peace,
When grippe has racked our vitals, oft
When doctors brought us no surcease,
We've thought he had it pretty soft.
Though limited his mental scope,
His simple wants are satisfied,
And now and then we've had the hope
To be an oyster when we died.

But in the news we've read of late
That in the deep and ooxy bowers
Dread epidemics decimate
Hot, raging fevers rack his head,
He writhes and moans the long days through
Upon the slimy ocean bed,
A helpless sufferer from flu.

It's bad enough to have to dwell
Amid the bleak and bitter brine,
Shut up within a narrow cell
With only ooze on which to dine.
If also he's compelled to burn
His lot is hard—we do not yearn
To be a simple oyster now.
